

On The Great White Way

NEAR-NEWS AND CHATTER FOR SATURDAY NIGHT

To the lady first correctly guessing the identity of the person of whom the following is a character sketch, and bringing a copy of this paper to the Tribune office, a cash prize of $1.00 will be given. The subject of the sketch is a prominent citizen of La Crosse. After winning one prize, a contestant will not be eligible to again compete for a period of three months.

GUESS WHO'S HERE!

He can't accept your spoken word, and he even discounts what you write "for value received." He was raised on the family Bible, albeit he disappointed by declining to become the "black sheep" which the world expects from a son of the cloth. While he is not rich, he distributes large sums of money among the people every day. From an authority on fairs and insurance, he has come into his own behind a grating which imprisons the E Pluribus Unum family. While he knows little about birds, he has a flock of eagles about him all the time, and under the tutelage of a master hand he has learned to smell a counterfeit through the keyhole. He has inherited the placidity of Der Fatherland, and instead of the cutting wit of the more intense races he is blessed with a kindly humor which never fails to discern the ridiculous. He's popular with the young women, and being of ripe eligibility he has the eye of the doting mamma. Some dresser, too—"style all the while!" In fact, he's about as all-right as any young man in this whole appreciative town—jess so!

SHOULD AULD ACQUAINTANCE BE FORGOT?

"It's an owercome sooth fo' aye an' youth, And it brooks wi' nae denial, That the dearest friends are the auldest friends, And the young are just on trial."

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

They capered about like a couple of kids when they first struck town, while their more sedate mesdames shook hands de-lightedly with a host of friends. Stopped by glad-handers at every step, it took the two big fellows two hours by the watch to cover the ground between the Hotel La Crosse and The Tribune office, whither they came to renew acquaintance with the editor whom they love despite his progressive errandisms.

For when that editor was a cub reporter they took him in hand and out of the riches of their old newspaper experience taught him the way a journalist should go, never dreaming that in their tales of the political adventures of "The Beaver" there was the germ of anarchy for which, later, they would be compelled to upbraid him. Indeed, come to think of it, the late "White Beaver" was the first La Crosse insurgent, and George and Will Powell were his prophets.

They haven't changed in the essentials from the big hearts of them to the wide sombrero and delectable shirts displaying necks that, habituated to the wind and rain of the prairies during those dare-devil days of Custer and Kit Carson, have ever since refused to submit to the tyranny of the stand-up collar.

However, a change there is. It was a sensation in this interested city when the doctors suffered a trembling barber to shear off the long black locks which we had come to regard as significant like unto the hair of Sampson. Now, behold Dr. George following his rotund brother into the ranks of the hairless lipped. It's gone—the romantic black mustache under which curled the lip that challenged a flippant Spanish noble to the wide sombrero and decollete behalf of the late Senator Mason, whose declination to fight the "greaser" had started something away down in the region that once had been encircled by a plainsman's cartridge belt.

But, just for that, Dr. George looks ten years younger, and so much like son "Ted," the Kansas City journalist (another insurgent) that one comprehends why the young writer never feels called upon to extend himself when beset by less than three able bodied men.

Well, they're back—with a grand idea that the Creator made LaCrosse and the Garden of Eden off the same piece, and La Crosse has heard no more delightful news than their announcement that, barring equatorial tunkets during the annual invasion of Old Boreas, they will rest content to spend their days in LaCrosse among the friends between whom and them exist the bonds of mutual affection which three decades of fellowship breed. Perhaps these good friends, returned from a pilgrimage to the wide places endeared to them by recollections of an adventurous youth, are singing with the poet, Hood:

"Peace and rest at length have come,
All the day's long toil is past;
And each heart is whispering 'Home, Home at last!'"

YARNS OF THE TOWN

After all, he was a part of the "White Way," professionally a participant in its controversies, "of counsel" in its problems, a venerated influence upon its conduct. Therefore may we not here repeat a typical incident in the professional career of the late G. M. Woodward?

It was told by an intimate friend and fellow practitioner at the memorial meeting of the bar association yesterday.

A case was on trial which, under the legal precedents usually followed, seemed certain to result in a verdict for the plaintiff, who was represented by Colonel Woodward and another lawyer. Thus the colonel was taken completely by surprise when the defendant's attorney moved for a non-suit and proceeded to present an ingenious argument which not only plainly interested the judge, but seemed to Mr. Woodward himself to be sweeping his cleverly framed case to wreck and ruin.

The impression on the other lawyers present was apparent, and it was plain that only a strong rejoinder could offset the plea of the defense. The task that confronted Colonel Woodward was to cope with a new and unique situation, analyze it and destroy the philosophical fortifications which his opponent had so ably constructed.

"Can you talk to the court for five minutes, until I think this thing over?" whispered Colonel Woodward to his colleague. The latter said he could, and for five minutes the venerable lawyer humped himself up in his chair, perfectly oblivious to what was going on. Then he arose and addressing the court in his halting manner that always labored over the weight of every word, he proceeded to completely annihilate the defense's position in an argument so deep and unanswerable that the case was won ere he had finished. Perhaps no other incident better illustrates the resource of this remarkable intellect.

Peter Valier, superintendent of the La Crosse & Southeastern of which the terminal is Viroqua, flashed by in a big automobile.

"Wouldn't it jar you?" exclaimed Dan MacMillan. "Everybody who knows Pete knows he has always had an automobile. To mention touring cars to him was to invite a bitter attack upon them. And now he goes honking about in a big roadster as blithely as the craziest auto bug. I wonder why?"

"Well, you see," volunteered Billy Hurligen, "Pete has to go to Viroqua every once in a while, and he had to have some way to get there."

HUERTA WILLING TO RESIGN UPON HIS OWN TERMS

First of His Conditions Is that Carranza Shall Not Succeed Him

WANTS HAND IN HIS SELECTION

Dictator Also Determined to Run for President at Election to Be Held

DEMANDS THAT AMERICANS LEAVE

Proposals of Ruler Are Learned from Mexicans Who Have Fled Capital

BY WILLIAM G. SHEPHERD (United Press Staff Correspondent.)
VERA CRUZ, May 16.—The terms under which Gen. Huerta will agree to mediation of the differences between his government and the United States include his retirement. This was learned here today from Mexicans who have fled from the capital. Huerta will stipulate, however, that his retirement shall be under the following conditions:

That Carranza, first chief of the revolutionists, shall not be made president.

That Huerta shall be consulted as to his successor and that he shall be permitted to run for the presidency in the regular elections to be held in July.

The dictator also stipulates that Americans shall depart from Mexico.

NELSON IN MADISON

MADISON, Wis., May 16. — Congressman John M. Nelson of the Third district was in Madison today.

WILL LAND REBEL ARMS AT TAMPICO

Administration "Passive" Toward Cargoes of Munitions Consigned to Carranzists

BUT KNOW WEAPONS FOR HUERTA

Apparent that There Is a Working Agreement to Keep Arms from Dictator

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Indications today pointed to acquiescence of the administration in plans of the constitutionalists to receive armaments at Tampico.

Secretary Daniels declared that the navy's attitude regarding cargoes at Tampico is "passive." Both he and Secretary Bryan hinted that there is nothing to prevent American manufacturers from shipping munitions to Tampico.

The only orders issued to the navy are general directions to be on the lookout for shipments of arms. Some manufacturers in this country have volunteered not to send arms to Mexico. Others have asked Secretary Daniels what attitude they should assume if they received orders for armaments. The secretary replied that he did not wish to give them advice or to lay down a policy for the administration.

The German ship Bavaria with arms for Huerta, due at Havana on Monday, is under orders to return its cargo to Germany.

It seemed apparent that there is a working agreement with other nations to prevent Huerta from getting arms. The Ypiranga is again cruising in Mexican waters and apparently still has her arms cargo aboard. There is an agreement, however, not to land them.

GETS DIVORCE

Petra Hanson was granted a divorce from her husband, Chas. Hanson, by Judge E. C. Higbee this morning. Mrs. Hanson alleged desertion and non-support. The following divorce cases were continued: Lizzie La Point vs. Louis La Point; Dora Rossberg vs. Edward Rossberg; Lydia Hansel vs. C. Hensel and August Strong vs. Charles Strong.

LOSE STRIKE FOR LONG HOURS

MINOT, N. D., May 16.—Probably the first strike on record in North Dakota for longer hours was lost here today when a new crew went to work excavating for the new federal building. The old crew struck because they could make only $2.25, working eight hours a day, at 25 cents an hour. They wanted to work ten hours and make $2.50.

AUTOMATIC FLAGMAN.

MADISON, Wis., May 16. — An "automatic flagman" is being installed under the direction of the railroad commission on a crossing of the Northwestern road in the town of Geneva, near Williams Bay. The "flagman" is on trial. It is a device which raises a red flag which it waves, shows a light and rings a bell when a train is approaching. It shows another light to the engineer, which shows him that it is in operation.

REFUGEE STEAMER LATE

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 16.—Although the steamer Cetina was with 150 refugees from Mexico aboard has not yet been sighted, the agents of the vessel here said today they were not worried regarding her. She has frequently been delayed by storms, they said.

MELLEN REVEALS HOW RAILROAD WORKED ON COURT

Declares that New Haven Bought Road with Stipulation that New Franchise Would Hold

NEW YORKERS PASS THE BUCK

Mellen Tale Told to Them Brings Word to "See McClellan" Who Is Abroad

THIRTEEN DEMANDS WITH SALE

New Haven Took Worthless Road Upon Agreement to Give Them Desired Advantages

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The interstate commerce commission today disclosed evidence indicating that part of the New Haven railroad's "high finance" was to influence the courts through politicians. Some of the important data uncovered today by Solicitor Folk showed that one of the thirteen demands of the New Haven board of directors which purchased the controlling interest in the New York, West Chester & Boston railroad was that the courts should uphold the validity of the franchise. It was this deal that former President Mellen declared cost $1,200,000 for stock worth "ten cents a pound."

Demands Upon Courts.

Only three of the thirteen articles were made public today. They showed that the New Haven financiers demanded a new franchise for the West Chester company; that they demanded that condemnation proceedings against the road be removed and that the courts uphold the renewed franchise. Later events in New York county proved that these demands were granted, according to evidence in possession of the commission.

A New York dispatch carries the following information:

The $1,200,000 New Haven deal with the New York, West Chester & Boston railroad was put up to the New York board of estimate by Charles S. Mellen in his sensational testimony in Washington and the members of the board in existence at that time, today said that Mayor George B. McClellan is the man to see about it. McClellan is in Europe.

The members of the board of estimate at the time referred to by Mellen were, Mayor George B. McClellan, Comptroller Herman A. Metz, Patrick A. McGowan, president of the board of aldermen; John F. Ahearn, president of Manhattan borough; Bird S. Coler, president of Brooklyn borough; Louis F. Haffen, president of the Bronx, Lawrence Gresser, president of Queens, and George Cromwell, president of Richmond.

Pass Buck to McClellan.

McClellan is dead. Ahearn and Haffen, when seen today said "see McClellan."

Records of the board of estimates show that franchise changes were made as Mellen stated.

Just how the judges were reached and how the franchise was renewed Solicitor Folk expects to learn from Mellen when he takes the stand next week. Because of the seriousness of the evidence it was intimated today that citizens formerly very prominent in New York and West Chester politics will be summoned.

Man Prominent Men

Some of the data brought to the attention of the commission today listed the stockholders of the City and County Contract company and of the West Chester railroad. In the list are prominent brokers and lawyers of New York, Boston, Providence and Albany. These statistics showed that J. T. Richards, president of the Boston Consolidated Gas company obtained 1,000 shares of the West Chester stock and 375 shares of the contract company as an attorney fee. Robert C. Pruyn, an Albany banker, had 150 shares in the latter company. Names of a number of big contractors and 24 "dummies" also appear as stockholders. Among the dummies was W. F. McCombs, or New York. His identity has not been established.

REBELS CAPTURE CITY OF MONCLOVA

Tuxpam Also Has Fallen Into the Hands of Carranza's Troops

500 FEDERALS HELD AT BAY

Retreating from Monclova They Are Cut Off and Surrounded; Desperate Battle in Progress

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Tuxpam, 60 miles from Tampico, fell into the hands of the rebels Thursday, according to information from Spanish refugees given to Consul Canada at Vera Cruz. They said Generals Aguila and Blanco were the captors.

PAREDON, Coahuila, via Torreon, May 16.—Surprised by constitutionalist scouts, a body of 500 federals who escaped from Monclova when that stronghold was captured by rebel forces late yesterday, is cornered today in the sand hills north of here. Latest reports showed a desperate struggle was in progress.

Messages brought here at dawn said fifty fleeing federals were killed when they stumbled into the camp of the constitutionalist soldiers. The rear guard of General Villa's army, which was to have marched south early today to join him in the attack on Saltillo, turned north to reinforce the scouts and had cut off the retreat of the Monclova federals who are evidently trying to reach Saltillo. A cavalry force sent from Monclova last night is harassing the rear of the fugitive column.

The sudden fall of Monclova was a surprise. Villa several days ago ordered General Francisco Murguía, with 3,000 troops, to attack that city, one of the northern federal strongholds. The federals were supposed to have been well equipped with artillery and prepared for a long siege. According to work brought from Monterey, they evacuated late yesterday, leaving nearly 200 dead. The rebels' loss is given at fifty.

A general rebel assault on Saltillo may be ordered before midnight. The main body of Villa's troops, which proceeded towards Saltillo in box cars, is thought to have detained ten miles north of Saltillo today.

TO PROBE EXPLOSION.

DETROIT, Mich., May 16.—A searching investigation into the causes of the explosion yesterday in the plant of the Mexican Crude Rubber company which cost the lives of ten employees and resulted in the serious injury of seven others, will be made by Coroner J. W. Rothacker. The coroner was prepared to impanel a jury this afternoon, but the inquest probably will not be held for two weeks.

WALTER B. ROSE IS FEEDING THE DOVES

The accompanying cut shows Walter B. Rose feeding the pigeons in the plaza of St. Marks, the center of interest in Venice, which is the most interesting city in Southern Europe. The hat in the background suggests that Louis Kuehn is not far away. The picture is from a postcard received by George B. Rose yesterday. Look carefully, and you will see one of the doves perched on Walter's hand. In the background is the Doge's palace, where the rulers of the Venetian republic lived when Venice was mistress of the seas. In the upper right corner of the picture can be seen the famous lion of St. Mark's, the symbol of Venice in her days of greatness.

"Beautiful weather. We leave for Milan today," is the message on the postcard.

ANNA HICKISCH MAY BE AT HOME-COMING

While Miss Anna Hickisch, famous operatic star, daughter of F. H. Hickisch, La Crosse, writes from London, Eng., that she may be unable to attend the Homecoming during the week of July 4, her letter holds out considerable hope that she will come.

Miss Hickisch's London address is 97 Thurlston road, West Norwood. The facts arrived in a letter addressed to Mayor Ori J. Sorenson.

Miss Hickisch was prima donna at the saengerfest held in this city several years ago, and captivated La Crosse by her singing.

JUDGE CONDEMNS PROTECTION LAW FOR CRIMINALS

Chief Justice Would Abolish Court Rule Giving Men on Trial the Option of Testifying

SHOULD BE MADE TO TAKE STAND

If Innocent No Harm Can Be Done; if Guilty They Should Not Be Protected by Law He Says

ELIMINATE ALL TECHNICALITIES

Judge Winslow at Bar Banquet Advocates Reconstruction of Present Day Court Procedure

That the bar of the state should unite with the bench in securing legislative enactments simplifying legal procedure, removing technicalities and otherwise improving the general legal machinery was the keynote of the speech by Chief Justice J. B. Winslow of the Wisconsin Supreme court at the bar association banquet at the La Crosse club last evening. His suggestion included the simplification of court procedure, the abolition of some of the courts at present in existence and the giving to the circuit courts or some other court of general jurisdiction the power to hear and dispose of at least the greater portion of the litigated cases.

"We have too many courts of overlapping jurisdiction at the present time with the county courts in some counties having extended jurisdiction, municipal courts in other places taking the same jurisdiction," said the chief justice, "and there is too much question at times whether a litigant is getting into the right court."

Judge Winslow also took the position that the time is ripe for the abolition of some of the old rules of law. He gave as one illustration the rule that a man accused of crime cannot be compelled to testify unless he wishes. "If he is innocent," said the judge, "he will suffer no wrong by being examined on the stand. If he is guilty he should not be protected."

The rule that if a person accused of crime does not testify in his own behalf that fact shall not be used against him in any manner was also cited.

"The courts of course, tell the jury in cases where the defendant does not take the stand, that that fact is not to be used against him but our experience as lawyers tells us that the average jury believes in spite of everything that if the defendant is not guilty he will testify in his own behalf."

However Judge Winslow made it emphatic that in his judgment Wisconsin comparatively free from technicalities in the administration of the law and that the impressions of the average layman on this proposition are for the most part the result of magazine and newspaper exploitation of extreme cases in other jurisdictions that have been criticized until they have become absurdities.

"I am not one who thinks that the administration of the law has been bad, but I do say that the administration of the law is being criticized. If laws are to fulfill the mission of justice, there must be some change made in the administration of the law. The bench and the bar should take measures to make these changes. There are many laymen who are trying to make changes, and lawyers who come in contact with its every

"DELEGATES" NOT IN SYMPATHY WITH MOVEMENT--MORRIS

Lieut. Governor Doubts Citizenship of Some of the Men Chosen to Go to Stalwart State Meet

RESOLUTIONS INSPIRED BY ONE MAN

Says Comparison of Those Adopted Here with Those of Other Places Proves This Beyond Doubt

WHAT TICKET WILL THEY SUPPORT

Wants to Know if They Will Promise Not to Contribute Money to Defeat Primary Choice

That the "delegates" to the stalwart state convention to be held in Milwaukee, chosen at the county convention here recently, are in many instances men not in accord with the Philipp movement, that many were named without their knowledge or consent and that some of the leading "delegates" have not lived in Wisconsin for years and that therefore their citizenship is in doubt, were declarations of Lieutenant Governor Thomas Morris in an interview today.

Mr. Morris said:

"No one questions the right of the few stalwarts that are left to hold a 'county convention' to elect 'delegates' to a 'state convention' if they want to. Everyone is willing that they 'take pride' in calling themselves stalwarts. It will be admitted that these gentlemen are all honorable men. But that is not the question."

Where Do They Stand?

"What the voter wants to know is whether these gentlemen are the same individuals who opposed primary elections, just and equal taxation, railroad legislation, election legislation, the income tax, the workmen's compensation act and shorter hours and better wages for men, women and children in factories and other places of employment; whether they are the same men who voted for George W. Peck for governor, David S. Rose for governor and 'Ikey' Karel for governor against progressive republican candidates who supported these reforms."

"If they are, then the voters want to know whether they have changed their attitude and principles and whether they are now willing to support progressive principles and favor popular government."

Resolutions the Same

"The resolutions that were adopted at the court house last Saturday answer these questions in the negative: It is plain from the resolutions that the group is still opposed to the primary, to just and equal taxation, to railroad legislation, to election legislation, the income tax, the workmen's compensation act and to legislation providing shorter hours and better wages for men, women and children in factories and other places of employment."

"Now, a word in regard to the methods these gentlemen have adopted. Although in an automobile canvass they raked the county with a fine-toothed comb to get men, preferably citizens known as 'progressives,' to consent to act as 'delegates' to the state convention."

CHOP SUEY JOINTS ILLEGAL SALOONS

CHICAGO, May 16.—Twenty-six local chop suey restaurants sell liquor to boys and girls, under age, according to the Good Law and Order league which has just completed an investigation. The league filed a report today with Mayor Harrison, alleging that in these restaurants drinks are served at all hours of the night and that some are connected with hotels and cheap lodging houses.

"Do you trust your husband implicitly?" "What a question! Why, of course I do—to a certain extent!"

Daddy's Bedtime

The Brave Cat
Who Saved Her Mistress' Life.

THAT day Evelyn had been to see a little girl who had the most beautiful little gray and white kitten. Of course when daddy got home that evening she had to tell him all about it the very first thing.

"It was such a cunning one," said Evelyn, "and it was so happy when it curled up in Margaret's lap."

"Well, maybe," said daddy. "It will grow up to be a fine brave cat like the one I want to tell you about this evening."

"There was once an old lady who had rheumatism. She had to spend almost all her time just sitting in a big chair. Walking was much too painful for her to try to do. Now, she lived in a great big house all alone, and she was very lonely. Some one suggested that she should get an animal of some sort for a companion. The old lady thought a cat would be nice."

"So one day she heard of some one who had a beautiful big yellow cat. This woman wanted to go on a long trip, and it would be impossible to take the cat with her. So the old lady at once sent for the woman and said she longed for a cat and would want it for always."

"So the cat came here, and she named him Warry."

"Warry was very happy in his new home, and he thought his mistress was delightful. He would sit for hours purring in her lap and perfectly happy, and his mistress would be so pleased that Warry was so satisfied."

"One night, after Warry had had his last drink of milk and was curling up in his basket, he smelled some strange smell."

"Suddenly he saw smoke. Up he sprang from his basket. He knew that the only place for smoke was in a chimney, and the very first thing he did was to rush for his mistress."

"He went over to the bed and pulled at the bedclothes. The old lady was sleeping very heavily, and he could not seem to awaken her. He tugged more violently than ever as the smoke began to come in the room. Then he gave the piercing cry of a cat in pain and one tremendous pull at the bedclothes. The old lady woke up."

"She realized at once what was the matter. Quickly she got out of bed. She almost forgot about her rheumatism, so frightened was she and so much depended on her hurrying, no matter how hard it was. She picked up Warry and put him under her arm, and together they went downstairs. The fire had broken out upstairs in the old lady's little sitting room. None of the smoke had as yet reached downstairs. They had not been there for a moment before the fire department came. Some one had heard the wild call of the cat and seen the smoke. Soon the fire was put out."

COMMENCEMENT PROGRAM CHANGED

Switch Date of Alumni Ball from Wednesday to Tuesday; Hise Sends Invitations

MADISON, Wis., May 16.—Two important changes in the university commencement week program will be effective this year. The first is the shifting of the annual alumni reception and ball from Wednesday to Tuesday evening, June 16. The ball has not been a full success in recent years because many alumni have returned home either Tuesday night or Wednesday noon. The ball this year will be limited strictly to alumni and former students. The annual alumni dinner will be held at noon, instead of in the evening, of Tuesday, June 16. Monday as usual will be reunion day for the five-year classes, and Tuesday alumni day.

President C. R. Van Hise, 79, has issued invitations to all his classmates for a reunion luncheon to be given at his home on Monday noon, June 16.

Thomas Lloyd Jones, '96, now principal of the Madison High school, has been elected by the Alumni Executive committee to succeed Louis F. Lochner, resigned, as general secretary of the Wisconsin Alumni association.

A reunion luncheon will be held on June 15 for former Chadbourne hall girls in honor of Miss Abby May, now returning from China, where she was one of the assistants of the Y. W. C. A. to investigate the possibilities for physical education for the women of China.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

When Hortense Interfered

By ELLA RANDALL PEARCE

Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Mrs. Hortense Bevier had been looking at her cousin with unusual interest, furtively at first across the little luncheon table, and now with a bold directness that had an immediate effect.

Her host shifted uneasily in his chair, wrinkled his brow, and smoothed one hand with the other. Then his mild blue eyes lifted to meet the stare of his cousin's black ones. "What now Hortense?" he asked amiably.

"Oh, I'm coming to that," Mrs. Bevier laughed shortly. "Of course, you know I've come for something. I'm too busy a woman to pay aimless visits, or go wandering about the country just for the fun of it. Yes, Basil. She looked reflectively at him, her expression softening. "You know I have your interests at heart, don't you? Sounds trite, but it's true. And I don't like to interfere in your affairs; but I've always had to look after you, Basil. Your such a dear, simple-hearted dreamer!"

"And you're such a wise, worldly person," drawled Basil.

Hortense sat straight in her chair, and her black eyes flashed across the silver tea set. "Sonia Gibbs!" she snapped expressively.

Basil Wakenly, too, sat a little straighter, and a tinge of color warmed his features; but he spoke gently. "Why should you wish to interfere—there? Miss Gibbs and I are above reproach, aren't we?"

"As individuals—yes. But Basil, I have learned of your attention to her, unimportant enough for some men; but from you—and after all of these years, Sonia Gibbs, of all women!"

Her cousin smiled indulgently. "We present a striking contrast, I know," he agreed. "But, somehow, we manage to get on pretty well together."

"Oh, Sonia would get on with anybody if she set herself to it," Hortense shook her head. "Basil, it's nonsense—it's madness! If you go on with this affair, you will spoil your whole life. In one way or another you will spoil it. I must speak frankly; I must warn you. Of all the women I know, Sonia Gibbs is the most frivolous and superficial; the most restless and capricious. The fashionable world is her world, and her time is given to all the pretty dissatisfactions of her set. Hortense rose and put her arm affectionately over her cousin's shoulder. "You are a man who loves simple living; a scholar, a dreamer, a dweller in the haunts of nature. You care more for your garden than for the parade grounds of the town. Basil, listen to me. I know Sonia's type well. She may be only trifling with you—flirting as we call it—but, even if she is sincere and should marry you, she will make you most unhappy."

"You are talking of marriage with a woman I have not begun to court yet," said Basil politely. "I thank you for your interest, Hortense, but I think you misjudge Sonia Gibbs. She is high-spirited and impulsive, but she is not so much in love with fashion and folly as you think. It is in the only life she has ever known; but she has her ideals and her dreams."

"Fudge and fiddle sticks!" snapped Hortense, indignantly. "Oh, Cousin Basil, you're the limit. Of course, Sonia can talk to suit her audience. But I should like to see her out of her element—here, for instance." She waved a hand to indicate the simply furnished apartment, the net-draped window opening upon a cosy porch, the flowering garden beyond. "Sonia in a cottage! even you would see the incongruity of it. Think of Sonia Gibbs in a linen frock and a shade hat working in your garden!"

"I have thought of it," replied Basil, gravely. "It is a pretty picture."

"Well, she never thought of it. I'll wager. You've seen her in her natural setting; but she's never seen you in yours. I've an idea, Basil. Invite Miss Gibbs down here with some others to make up a week end party; and I'll stay to play hostess to your guests."

A startled moment, a reflective pause, and then: "I will," said Basil. Hortense was secretly exultant.

She had been honestly worried over the prospect of her beloved cousin falling a victim to the wiles of a young woman whose careless coquetries were the gossip of her set.

To her delight, Sonia appeared dressed in the height of fashion with a perky hat perched on an elaborate coiffure and a foolish little patch of black court-plaster ornamenting one powdered cheek. She flung her ruffled parasol aside, and tripped up and down the garden walks in her high-heeled, buckled slippers, uttering little impetuous cries.

"What a lot of flowers! Oh, look at these old-fashioned petunias—and such beds of pansies! Pansies always reminds me of children's faces, Mr. Wakenly."

"Artful little minx!" reflected Hortense, standing on the porch.

The cottage was gay for a few days. Basil's guests were charmed with the picturesque simplicity of his home, and the staid bachelor himself appeared at his best among his familiar books and flowers. Mrs. Bevier as hostess was especially attentive to Sonia. She impressed upon the young woman's mind the fact that her cousin Basil was suited to just such rural surroundings, and that he detested city life and the ways of fashionable society.

"I fear he will always be a bachelor," sighed Hortense. "No modern woman would care to share his quiet existence. Weren't you surprised when you saw his humble little cottage?"

"I call it a very comfortable little cottage," smiled Sonia.

"It's terribly lonely in the winter," said her hostess. "And as see, Basil has only one servant, and his furniture is awfully old-fashioned. But he's set in his ways."

Sonia, in her smart attire, with her nervous, whimsical manner, her cynical chatter and mocking laughter did indeed appear to strike a note of discord in the pastoral scene.

The last evening of her visit she drew Basil to the far end of the spacious garden, and they sat together on a low rustic seat. Sonia wore white, and a chiffon scarf draped over her head gave her a soft loveliness. Her eyes shone through the shadows.

"I want to tell you while I have a chance how much I have enjoyed this outing," she said earnestly. "It has all been so new to me. I shall dream of those quiet, peaceful rooms and this beautiful garden for years to come."

Basil looked at her wistfully. A swift emotion emboldened him. "And of me too?" he faltered.

"Of course!" Sonia laughed sweetly. "Why, I shall not need to dream of you. I shall see you, and often, I hope."

"I shall come town, of course," sighed Basil. "But I would like to know that you would dream of me, or at least think of me, sometimes. Sonia, I have dreamed of my home—my garden—and you were there!"

The girl turned a startled face to him; but her hand fell caressingly on his arm.

"Don't say anything—you don't mean," she said breathlessly. "We have been such good friends. I'm afraid—"

"Afraid to hear me speak the truth, Sonia?" He clasped both her hands warmly. "Why? You have not kept me from loving you. Are you afraid of yourself, dear? Now that you have seen what I have to offer a woman, could you give up your way?"

"I think you understood," she whispered shyly at parting. "If I had not come here, Basil and I might never have known each other so well. I thank you for that, dear Mrs. Bevier."

Nodding dumbly, Hortense dared not look at the happy face of her cousin who stood beside her; but a low chuckle warned her the Basil had heard. His thanks—and more than his thanks—would be her portion later!

EMERY TELLS OF WAR ON "DOPESTERS"

State Food Commission Says Public Must Be Ever Alert to Prevent Adulteration

MADISON, Wis., May 16.—"Effective food laws for the protection of the public have not, like the sheet knit at the four corners in Peter's vision, come down to earth from the open heavens with things to eat which God hath cleansed. They have come as the result of a good fight having been fought and they bear the scars of battle."

This was the concluding statement in an address here today by State Dairy and Food Commissioner J. Q. Emery speaking on the work of the dairy and food department before the civic club. The organization is composed of women who meet on alternate Saturdays at lunch to listen to an address on some economic problem. Commissioner Emery told of the wholesale adulteration of food in the state twenty and ten years ago when "coffee beans made out of rye paste were created and colored to look like the real thing." All this had changed through the enactment and enforcement of food laws. Purity Was Fought.

Commissioner Emery said that every bill for curtailing the adulterator was bitterly fought in the legislature. He pointed out that that states took the initiative in pure food enactments and that it was not until 1906 that it was possible for congress to enact a national law.

"Greed of gain being the impelling motive, the opportunities for the making of such great profits are not to be surrendered without a struggle," said Mr. Emery. "For many years there has been a tremendously wealthy and powerful aggregation of manufacturers and purveyors of foods with which state organizations of a similar character are allied, exercising such vigilance on the subject of food legislation that not a bill relating to food matters is introduced into congress or the legislature of any state that it is not forthwith reported to those employed to take care of such matters. If the bill is regarded as unfavorable to their interests, every means which wealth and power can secure is employed to defeat such legislation. Unseen and impalpable forces work behind and through legislators as a part of the invisible government so aptly characterized by President Wilson."

BEE KEEPERS TO MEET AT M'GREGOR

M'GREGOR, Iowa, May 16.—The joint meeting of the bee keepers of Iowa and Wisconsin will be held at M'Gregor next Tuesday, May 19, at the Heights. The bee men plan a picnic occasion and will bring their families and a basket of lunch. Hon. E. E. France, of Wisconsin, will speak on "Control of Bee Diseases" and other subjects will be under discussion. Foul brood, a serious disease, is badly scattered along the river and the bee keepers of both states are interested in co-operating with their state officials in stamping it out. A number of prominent bee men will be in attendance and a large gathering of honey producers is expected. Every one interested in bees is invited and a pavilion will be provided for shelter in case of rain.

ARGUE BALL CASE

CHICAGO, May 16.—Arguments in the "Chief" Johnson case, charged by the Cincinnati Exposition company, owner of the Cincinnati Reds of violation of his baseball contract in umpiring to the Kansas City Reds, were heard by Judge Poell of the superior district court today. Johns for the Reds, argued that the National League contract was valid, being patterned after similar labor contracts, whose legality had been sustained by various courts.

of living to share milage? You love the gay world of fashion; but—

"Love it!" Sonia's voice rose shrill and quivering. "I hate it! I am sick of it all—the struggles, the shams, the fever of it. Oh, Basil Wakenly, if you only knew! I have been like a squirrel in a cage, chasing madly around in a vain circle!"

"Sonia! But you—you—why, you've had many chances." Basil was steeped in bewilderment, while his heart was singing a happy song under it all.

"Men in my own set! They all wanted me to go on being a fashionable woman," retorted Sonia, bitterly. "Ah, Basil, if you really want me I shall be so glad to come and learn to live in your way."

Her soft arms clasped round his neck.

It was a new Sonia that said goodbye to Mrs. Hortense Bevier the next day.

"I think you understood," she whispered shyly at parting. "If I had not come here, Basil and I might never have known each other so well. I thank you for that, dear Mrs. Bevier."

I had asked several doctors if there was anything I could take to help me and they said there was nothing that they knew of. "BEAR THAT THE OPPOSED

SHALL BEWARE OF THEE"

It is probable that our good friend and former associate, W. E. Barber, will be selected to edit the copy which is to appear in this paper as paid advertising, in defense of the "regular" republican platform and candidates.

Mr. Barber will give a good account of himself. As was said of Edmund Burke, "he chooses his position foolishly, and defends it like a philosopher."

We have to warn our readers that friend Barber is wont to "get hot under the collar," and that he may at times "pass with his best violence." However, we shall enjoy the experience, for one of the things that make life endurable is the pleasure of disagreeing with a gentleman whom the poet, Addison, might have had in mind when, in "The Spectator," he wrote:

"In all thy humors, whether grave or mellow,

Thou'rt such a touchy, testy, pleasant fellow,

Hast so much wit and mirth, and spite about thee,

That there's no living with thee, nor without thee."

AN ACT OF

AUTHORITY

In a front page editorial a few evenings ago you took Mr. Goetzman of the Listman mill to task for explaining to his employees what was the purpose of the convention that was to be held on Saturday.

You would have it appear that Mr.

Goetzman or any other employer of labor, has no right to talk these matters over with their employees, that it was coercion and against the law.

Again we revert to Mr. W. E. Barber's letter relating to the late "regular" republican (stalwart) convention, from which we quote the above paragraph.

As a matter of accuracy, we did not say what Mr. Goetzman did was "against the law," nor is it, although it hardly accords with the spirit of our new election laws. We agree with Mr. Barber that it is perfectly proper for an employer to "talk politics" with his employees in an informal way. But here's the rub:

When Mr. Goetzman called his men into his office to talk politics to them

HE PERFORMED AN ACT OF AU-THORITY DIRECTLY BEARING

UPON THEIR ATTITUDE TOWARD

A POLITICAL ENTERPRISE. It was that ACT OF AUTHORITY, with its tendency to influence political action of his employees beyond any mere argument which he could present, that we criticize.

One may call it an indiscretion, another an impropriety. To us it is mainly significant as a reminder of "the good old days."

HERE'S A PARALLEL

CASE TO CONSIDER

Perhaps, as they ruminate upon the mysteries of the late lamented

"Regular" republican (stalwart) convention, our readers may have raised in their minds questions to which the answers are simply popping out of the following editorial inspired in the pen of the Milwaukee Journal editor by a similar experience in Milwaukee:

The conference, or directors' meeting, or whatever it was, of the Home

Rule and Taxpayers' league mustered less than two dozen representatives of a movement that these gentlemen describe as "spontaneous," "statewide," "overwhelming" and a few other superlatives. From the standpoint of attendance it was a fizzle.

Claiming to represent the state, it drew from only a few scattered sections of the state. From small acorns, however, great oaks spring.

Size is no criterion of earnestness. It is pertinent to consider who these men were and what they did.

The league is nonpartisan; it says so. If it did not, the names of such well known Tory democrats as Harry

Bolens of Port Washington and Jim

Clancy and such well known Tory republicans as John W. Groves of Madison and ex-State Senator James of Richland Center would be proof enough that it is—well, at least bipartisan.

The sentiment of the league was handsomely harmonious. The speakers were all convinced that whatever

Wisconsin has wanted in the last ten or a dozen years she no longer wants and ought not to have. They were moderate, however, and failed to accuse the administrations of recent years of murder or even of mayhem.

The resolutions are magnificent, except that they do not mean anything, or if they do, they do not say it.

The resolutions indeed declaim against tax burdens, against espionage, against "interference," against bureaucracy. They demand the abolition of useless commissions, and the "restoration of government to the people."

Recognizing the fact that twenty-two might not be a thoroughly representative gathering of the voters of Wisconsin, the conference calls for a convention of 1,000 to draw up a platform and name candidates for this "nonpartisan" movement.

Their songs mean naught to me;

I care not for the beauteous spring,

It holds for me no glee.

Among the budding trees.

I am forlorn as I can be,

The future's grim and dire;

There is no joy on earth for me,

I've got to buy a tire.

wanting a match, called at the house

I want you to kill them."

he might look at the moon through the telescope.

"Surely you can," said Ball. "Come round tonight and I shall be very happy to let you see it through the

"Can't I see it now?" asked the farmer, surprised.

"I am sorry that you cannot," said the astronomer. "You will have to wait until night."

"Huh! Then your old telescope is not so great a thing as I thought it was," cried the man, relieved from his illusion. "I can see the moon at Nasal Symphonies.

An Italian has invented an electrically operated machine for propelling distinctive odors, by which he proposes to produce in a Milan theater a "symphony of odors." The inventor insists that a degree of harmony may be sensed through the olfactory nerve not unlike that sensation we term music when sensed through the auditory nerves. Instead of a "Polonaise in E Flat" he would give a "Fantasia in Violet" or a "Nocturne in Apple-blossoms." By combining a number of these instruments, he declares, he is able to produce arpeggios of perfume, harmonies of fragrance and haunting nuances of scent which will rival, if not surpass, the crashing chords and melodious phrases of master musicians.—Popular Mechanics.

Every day something awful that might have occurred in Mexico fails to develop.

THE LATEST BOOKS

The "Incandescent Lily," by Governor Morris, is a recently published collection of some of the very best of his short stories. Quite a few of them have appeared of late in the current magazines. "The Incandescent Lily," the first of them, is the longest and one of the best. "The Custody of the Child" and "The Back Seat" are in a more serious vein while the rest are all related in Mr. Morris' most lively and cheering manner. The "Championship" is an excellent tennis story and will appeal to all lovers of the sport. It is quite unnecessary to recommend this writer's work to the lovers of fascinating fiction. His place among our present day story tellers and particularly the short story writers is in the very forefront and he has been regarded by many as the nearest approach to O. Henry. "The Incandescent Lily" will be thoroughly dog eared and thumb marked within another several months. (Chas. Scribner's Sons.)

Owen Johnson's "Salamander" is the story of a young girl of the present day whose eager and venturesome nature takes her to New York in search of a real opportunity to earn an independent living. Dore Baxter, the Salamander, is handsome and attractive of course. She is determined upon setting forth for New York to make the acquaintance there of any one she may choose to meet. In this she is more than successful. She comes to know all the many types of men of New York. Four of the men she meets are especially anxious to win her hand in marriage. Among them are a middle aged judge, a man of unusual intellectual attainments; a rich voluntary or "flesh-burner" as the author terms him; a wealthy young football hero, and a successful journalist. It will be seen that Dore is an unusual young girl. With her great beauty and a bit of audacity she is able to attract these big men and they are unable to withstand her. One is apt to resent the girl's methods of leading them on though at the same time one can't help admiring her cleverness. After her season of unconvention and social adventure—after the curiosity and eagerness of youth has subsided she becomes—as the author words it—"a conventional member of society and rather extreme in her conservatism." The story does not so much pretend to discuss a problem as it does to present a picture of an age of shifting ideals and a restless faith. In this the author has admirably succeeded, although one feels that he has fallen a little short perhaps of his original intention as set forth in his foreword. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

In his "Essence of Astronomy" Edward W. Price has given us a well illustrated treatise on the sun, moon and stars, touching upon most of the important facts regarding them in an interesting and readable manner. It is quite unlike the usual book of the kind in that it avoids technical terms and presents to the average reader the answers to problems of astronomy that may have occurred to him and so arranged that they are well suited to quick reference. There is a separate chapter devoted to each member of the solar system, with an especially interesting account of the freaks and oddities of the skies. The book is illustrated with photographs and drawings made at the bog observatories. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

John Bigelow's "American Policy" deals with the relations of our republic with other nations and particularly upon which our policy is founded. The three, to sum them up, are the "Washington precept," discouraging entangling alliances, the Monroe Doctrine and the "Boliver Idea," the last being the policy that nurtures Pan-Americanism and furthers the co-operation of all American nations for the continued control of the western hemisphere by South and North Americans. In view of our present difficulty with Mexico the book is most timely. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

"The Dry Fly and Fast Water" by George La Branche is a splendidly made volume, offering a treatise on fly fishing that will warm the heart of all the disciples of Ike Walton. The book concerns itself especially with fly floating on trout streams and also with fly fishing in general. Mr. La Branche has handled his matter in a very able way and particularly for one who in an engagingly modest preface points out a presumed unfitness for the tasks of an author. He seems to have something of the delightful and simple charm of his famed predecessor who favored posterity with the "Complete Angler." Some of the chapter headings are "Early Experiences," "The Value of Observation," "Where and When to Fish," "The Imitation of the Natural Insect" and "A Few Patterns of Flies." There are eight chapters in all. (Charles Scribner's Sons.)

Mr. Carl Crow's "America and the Philippines" is a well handled treatment of the relationship of the United States and their fruitful possession. Mr. Crow concerns himself with a number of problems and questions in this connection that daily become more important. Whether or not the Philippines have benefited under U. S. control, whether they are fit to govern themselves, what is our duty to them and what are their present conditions are all matters that he discusses with an unusual degree of clarity and sound judgment. It is clear after reading it that the author has given his theme a great deal of study and thought. The book is a valuable contribution to the furtherance of proper relations between America and the Philippines. (Doubleday Page & Co.)

Charles Scribner's Sons have recently put forth volumes 3 and 4 of the "New Guides to Old Masters" series, a set when complete that will include helpful notes on all paintings of importance in the museums and galleries of Europe. The third volume comprises comment on the paintings to be found in the Rijks Museum at Amsterdam, the Royal Gallery at The Hague and the Huis Museum at Haarlem. The fourth volume deals with the Royal Museum at Antwerp and the Royal Museum at Brussels. The books are being prepared and arranged by John C. Van Dyke.

William Tyler Olcott, author of "Star Lore of All Ages" has recently offered a companion volume entitled "Sun Lore of All Ages," dealing with the myths and legends of the sun. The book is of unusual interest as it traces in a singularly way the whole progress of the human race from the earliest day to the present. It shows how the sun has been the foundation of all mythology and concerns itself with the world of fascinating facts. The tremendous importance of the sun and its functions, its influence on the development and well being of all mankind, has provided every age with matter for speculation and study. Whether or not one is interested in ethnology or mythology this book cannot fail to hold throughout with its interest. (G. P. Putnam's Sons.)

fore him, God is a refuge for us." The church will be beautifully decorated for the occasion of the centennial celebration of the independence of Norway.

The congregations of the Charles Street church and of Bethel church, of which Rev. O. L. Christensen is pastor, will leave about 1:15 for the south side at the West Avenue Norwegian Lutheran church, West avenue and Division street. From there they will march to Myrick park. The choir of both the churches will be part of the chorus of 100 voices which will sing at the celebration at the park.

New Malarial Parasite.

Sir Ronald Ross, who demonstrated that the malarial parasite is spread among mankind by means of mosquitoes, has communicated to the Royal society a paper by Dr. J. W. Stephens and Sir Alfred Jones, professor of tropical medicine in Liverpool university, recording the receipt from Pachmar, central provinces, India, of a blood slide from a native child containing malignant parasites different "from any malarial parasite of man yet described." It is extremely active, with thin processes occurring as long tails to more or less ring-shaped bodies. The new parasite is dubbed Plasmodium tenue.

HUERTA WEAKENING IN MEXICO CITY

Losing His Grip on People and It Is Rumored that Blanquet Plans to Seize Reins

WASHINGTON, May 16.—

Consul Silliman at Saltillo is safe and on his way to Mexico City, according to information to the state department from the Brazilian minister in Mexico City today. The dispatch said that Silliman was due to arrive in the capital either last night or this morning, but that his delay was probably due to the tearing up of railroad tracks between Saltillo and Mexico City.

By JOHN E. NEVIN.

Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The murder of Private Samuel Parks, admittedly slain without trial, although captured in the uniform of the United States army at Vera Cruz, will not be followed by acts of reprisals at this time. This was made very clear by the attitude of the state department today.

Although the war department is aflame over the killing, and Secretary Bryan insists that it is simply

Howard Clears Ship

WASHINGTON, May 16.—

Admiral Howard, balked by Mexican federal officers in his plan to clear the refugee ship Newport at Mazatlan today took affairs into his own hands and cleared the vessel himself, according to his dispatches to the navy department. Officials felt Howard's action might give Huerta fresh opportunity to claim that the United States is overstepping its authority on Mexican soil pending mediation.

another outrage for which Huerta is responsible and which, like all others that preceded it, will be taken up in the final settlement.

Wilson Backs Bryan.

Bryan is adamant and he has the full support of President Wilson that nothing is to be permitted to interfere with mediation. He believes the Niagara Falls conference will eliminate Huerta and will suggest a real plan for complete restoration of peace in Mexico.

The secretary also believes the assurance sent to him from Mexico City by the Brazilian and British representatives, that Consul Silliman is safe at Saltillo. He privately declared Silliman will be sent through to Mexico City and then to Vera Cruz as soon as it is safe to do so. Saltillo is under fire. Bryan

Common Sense Thrift

Not what a man gets out of life for himself, but what he puts into it for others makes him rich. But this does not mean that a man should not work to make and save money, because oftentimes a man can do more good with his money than in any other way. So it that prompts the prudent man to avoid reckless spending of money which might better be saved for some good purpose. Genuine thrift is free from all suspicion of meanness or narrow-mindedness. It is an entirely praiseworthy thing. Nobody need be ashamed to practice it. In fact, you are more open to just criticism if you do not follow some regular plan of saving such as maintaining a savings bank account.

Is Not Selfishness

has been assured, and he is personally satisfied the consul has not reached safety because of that fact, and not because he has been slain by Huerta's soldiers.

Mexico City Turbulent.

Meanwhile, Mexico City holds the attention of the administrators and the mediators. It is admitted that the proceedings there during the next few days will have an important bearing on the mediation conferences. Every official dispatch from the Mexican capital emphasizes the critical state of affairs there. The populace is incensed against Huerta. The loyalty of his soldiers is questioned. Despite the strictest censorship it is admitted that mob rule is threatened.

Because of this there is general belief that Huerta will either eliminate himself via the mediation route, or be eliminated by the people in the capital. He is paying little attention to the problems of state. The real head of the government, according to reports reaching the diplomatic corps here, is General Blanquet. There is also a feeling that Blanquet plans to seize the reins of government should the occasion become propitious.

The Huerta commissioners to the mediation conference were due here late today.

The American commissioners have received final instructions from President Wilson. It is understood that they have been directed to make it clear at the outset, that, while this government accepted the principles of mediation, it must insist that Huerta is to be eliminated. The manner of the elimination will be left to the mediators. Another point to be raised is that he shall not select his own successor and Genoa's Capture a Century Ago.

One hundred years ago the rich city of Genoa, familiar to all readers of American history as the birthplace of Christopher Columbus, was taken by a force of English and Sicilians. For centuries Genoa had been a pawn on the chessboard of European politics. In 1805 it had been annexed to the French empire. Now, in consequence of the overthrow of Napoleon, it was wrested from France and some months later united to the kingdom of Sardinia. The army that captured the city on this date 100 years ago was in command of Lord William Bentinck, a celebrated English general. Many years later this same English general, while serving as governor-general of India, earned enduring fame by abolishing the "suttee," the custom in India which required widows to be burned on the funeral pyres of their husbands.

RESOURCE CONTROL BEFORE GOVERNORS

Will Be Chief Subject for Debate at Conference of State Executives in Madison in June

EAST AND WEST DIVIDED

Plans of Western Officials Not Agreed to by Representatives of the East; Plan Entertainment

MADISON, Wis., May 16.—What promises to be one of the most interesting debates at the governor's conference which convenes here June 9, will be over the subject of the state control of natural resources. The governors of eastern states are in favor of national control. The issue over this subject has become so pronounced that the governors of the western states held a conference at Denver last month and passed strong resolutions in favor of state control of natural resources.

The subject will be presented to the conference by Governor William Spry of Utah, who has notified Secretary Miles Riley of the conference that he desires to present this subject to the meeting. In a statement issued by the western governors, which has just been received here, they declare that "it is the duty of each state and every state to adopt such laws as will make for true conservation of our resources, prevent monopoly and render the greatest good to the greatest number; and that as rapidly as the states prepare themselves to carry out such a policy of conservation the federal government should withdraw its supervision and turn the work over to the states."

One of the plans that will be urged by the western governors in connection with the policy of conservation is that five per cent of the public lands in the several states should be granted to the states individually to aid in the construction of permanent roads. In view of the provisions of the water power law passed at the last session of the legislature another proposal of the western governors its control over the water of a state

Most of the governors of the eastern states are opposed to the views advanced by western governors on this subject and the entire afternoon of Wednesday is given over to a free discussion of this subject.

PHILIPP LOOKING UP THE LAW

Leader of State Stalwarts Writes to Madison for

Thomas Mahon, claim agent in the office of Governor McGovern and the man who handled the governor's affairs in the assembly during the last legislative session, yesterday made the announcement that he would not run for attorney general on a ticket headed by Walter C. Owen for governor and that he would not be a party to any "harmony" ticket framed by the La Follette people.

The rather testy declaration of the governor's agent is received with considerable amusement among progressive republican leaders and a poll of the men in touch with the state situation fails to reveal anything which Mr. Mahon could possibly construe as an invitation to get on the band wagon.

M. B. Olbrich of the law firm of Aylward & Olbrich, Madison, is suggested as a candidate for attorney general and is being urged by leaders who know of his progressive record.
Mr. Olbrich, with Aylward, defended Insurance Commissioner Herman L. Ekern in the governor's unsuccessful attempt to oust him.

Philipp Would Know Law
Emanuel L. Philipp, Milwaukee, proposed as the stalwart candidate for governor, has written Secretary of State John S. Donald, it is understood, for copies of the corrupt practices act and a "liberal supply" of blanks for recording expenditures.

W. D. Connor, Marshfield, Wis., sees no walk away for democracy in the state this fall. He maintains that had the national administration gone smoothly and business remained good the democratic chances would have been greatly enhanced. He says, however, that affairs are not smooth at Washington and that business is far from good.

Brumder Talk Politicians in the "state of Milwaukee" are talking of Col. W. C.
Brumder as the republican United States senatorial nominee. The Brumder talk starts with regularity every time there is an important state or national office to be filled and with equal regularity is put to rest by Mr. Brumder.

George P. Mathes in the Sentinel, "it is unlikely that the present move will meet with any better success than those which went before."

ness with cancer. Mrs. Oeltjendier was stricken last January, and underwent an operation the twenty-second of that month. For a time, it was thought that there was hope for her recovery, but recently she suffered a relapse.

Mrs. Oeltjendier was born in Guttenberg, Iowa, August 2, 1855. On September 11, 1876, she was married to George Oeltjendier at Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Oeltjendier came to La Crosse in 1881. They lived for one year on the south side, moving to the north side in 1882, when Mr. Oeltjendier started his cigar factory.

Surviving besides her husband are six children, Ernest and Mrs. A. D.
Strauss, of Minneapolis; and George,
J., Mrs. F. P. James, Mrs. J. R.

WILL GET THEIR PAY FROM STATE

Proposal to Eliminate Their Wage During War Is Struck Out of Money
Bill

DENVER, Col., May 16.—The special session of the Colorado legislature called to consider the situation growing out of the coal miners' strike will adjourn at noon today with its chief accomplishment the passage of a bill appropriating $1-000,000 to meet past and future expenses of the militia in the strike field.

The clause insisted upon by the house, preventing the payment for strike services of militiamen who were also employees of the coal companies, was eliminated.

Many Company Employees

Of the 165 enlisted men of Troop A of Trinidad and Company B, Second Infantry, who participated in the battle of Ludlow when two women, six men and eleven children were killed, 126 were employees of the coal operating companies. This was shown by the rosters of the two companies sent to the senate by the adjutant general. Company B roster carried 35 men, exclusive of officers, four of whom were mine guards or other employees of the operators. The roster of Troop A showed 130 enlisted men, of whom 122 were company employees. Company B, commanded by Lieutenant K. E. Linderfelt, was on guard at Ludlow, when the battle there started. Troop A was sent to the rescue after the fighting began.
Of Troop A, 21 members were employees of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, 50 employees of the Victor American Fuel company and one employee of the Rocky Mountain Fuel company.

Arranged for Battle

Testimony regarding the Ludlow battle was taken from enlisted men of the two companies during today's session of the general court martial in progress at the state rifle range near Golden. Sergeant P. N. Cullen of Company B testified the militiamen arranged for a battle "in anticipation of trouble." He insisted, however, that the strikers fired the first shots.

LABOR CONDITIONS NOT UP TO 1913

Big Demand for Female Help but There Is Small Market for Male Workers

Mrs. Clara L. Statham, superintendent of the La Crosse branch of the state free employment bureau today declared that conditions are not so good this year than last. The demand for male help has fallen off in comparison with last year and the applications for male positions are in excess of the jobs. Last year there was a greater demand than supply.

There is a large demand for girls for general housework but male work of all kinds is slow.

Employment conditions are universally quiet all over the state, according to reports received by the industrial commission. There was a slight improvement in April compared with March, but compared with April last year conditions are decidedly worse.

Applications at the state free employment offices were 80 for every 100 jobs last year in April. This year there were 120 for every 100 jobs. Positions secured were 1934 in April, 1913, and only 1713 in April, 1914. Women are in greater demand than men. The number of women placed was 555 during the month just closed compared with 386 a year ago.

Factory employment is unusually slow and outside work is a good deal behind last year. The only exception is farm work. By means of an extensive advertising campaign and the assistance of an interpreter the state employment offices have doubled the number of calls for farm help and also tripled the number of men placed on farms as compared with last year. In April 412 men were referred to farmers for work and 226 were actually hired. Many of these were foreigners who could not speak English.

Demand in the building trade was twenty-seven per cent less than in April last year and calls for common laborers of all kinds fell off more than half. Last year at this time the railroad companies called for many men for track work. This year practically none of this work is being done, and work on the lake boats is also slow.

The metal trades ordinarily put on additional forces in the spring, but during April fewer men were employed in these trades than in March.

since coming up here you've engaged yourself to Billy, Harry, Ed and you have any objection to all of us chipping in to buy the engagement ring?"

BAR IS A UNIT IN EXTOLLING THE LIFE OF WOODWARD

For nearly two hours yesterday afternoon the lawyers of the La Crosse County Bar association view with one another in extolling the virtues of the late Colonel Gilbert Motier Woodward. Seldom before in La Crosse have so many joined in unqualified praise such as was bestowed on the late barrister.

Fully 100 members of the bar from various places in the Sixth Judicial circuit, and a large number of friends of Col. Woodward filled the court room when the memorial was presented by the committee of the bar. Following the reading of the memorial by Attorney Frank Winter, Attorney George H. Gordon, a member of the committee, arose and gave a short address, recalling incidents in the life of Col. Woodward.

Missed by the Bar
"He will be missed most by the members of this bar who knew him best. He was a good citizen and an able lawyer," he said.

Attorney Charles H. Schweizer who came in close contact with Col. Woodward through his connection with the former law office of Losey, Woodward and Lees, said:

"The four great characteristics of a lawyer should be courtesy, honesty, faithfulness and truth. Looking over the life of Col. Woodward, all who knew him must realize how fully he filled the requirements of a lawyer in these respects.

"He has done the work of a true man. Crown him. Honor him. Love him!" he concluded.

W. S. Burroughs, president of the La Crosse Bar association, gave a short address saying he feels the loss of the death of Col. Woodward perhaps more deeply than any other member of the bar.

"We were of about the same age and I have associated much with Col. Woodward since I first knew him in 1864. His predominant characteristic was his superstitious ideas on the fulfillment of his duty."

As an illustration of this Mr. Burroughs told that when Col. Woodward was city attorney and elected to congress, he resigned as city attorney. Just before leaving for Washington he went to Mr. Burroughs who had been appointed his successor and told him that a certain matter, the opening of certain streets, had been turned over to him by the council. This was the only thing he had been unable to complete before leaving, and he became most emphatic in his requests that Mr. Burroughs complete the work without fail, for fear the council would think that he had shirked his duty.

Upon returning from Washington the first thing he did was to go to Mr. Burroughs and inquire if the streets had been opened. Upon learning that they had, he declared he had been worrying about them ever since and a great load was lifted from his shoulders.

Mr. Burroughs then spoke of the later life of Col. Woodward saying that his mind was as clear as in his younger days up to the last.

legates" to the "state convention," they failed, and were compelled to elect as "delegates" a body of men more than half of whom, named without their knowledge or consent, are not in sympathy with their program and will not attend the "state convention." More, they elected as delegates men who have not lived in Wisconsin for years and whose citizenship is in question. Then, too, resolutions adopted are almost identical with those adopted by similar gatherings held in other parts of the state. If one compares the resolutions adopted here with those adopted elsewhere it is impossible to believe that they were not inspired by the same man, if not actually written by him.

"I suspect that the voters will ask this further question of these gentlemen: 'Will you agree to support the regular progressive republican ticket that will be nominated in the September primary, and not to contribute money to defeat it?'"

WILL CLEAN HOUSE FOR POOR WIDOWS

The advisory board of the Associated Charities under the direction of Miss Kate Lee, acting secretary, is about to inaugurate a house cleaning campaign for the poor widows of La Crosse. The idea, which originated with Miss Lee, is something new in the line of charity and will be tried out as an experiment.

The play as outlined by the secretary today is to visit the homes of the widows and supervise the cleaning of the houses, and then to provide the necessary furniture to make the home comfortable.

Miss Lee is now awaiting donations of furniture and issues a general invitation to all for contributions of curtains, carpets, chairs, tables, beds and bedding and any other articles of furniture which may be used.

ALL READY FOR BIG CELEBRATION

Preparations for the "Syttende Mai" celebration to be held by the Norwegians of the city and the surrounding country tomorrow are practically completed. With the exception of minor details, everything is in readiness for the celebration of the centenary of the independence of Norway.

Program in Park

Following services in the churches in the morning, the Norwegians of the city will gather at Myrick park, where a program will be given. The congregations of the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran church, Sixth and Division streets, and the West Avenue church will meet in joint service at the Sixth street church, in the absence of Rev. Rasmus Andersen, who will be out of the city. Rev. Andrew Hermanson of the Norwegian Methodist church, will speak in the afternoon at the celebration at Arkdale, Wis., a former charge. He will preach at his church in the morning.

The Norden band of Rev. Maglessen's parish, and a chorus of 100 voices, the Normanna Sangerkor and several church choirs will participate in the exercises at the park. James Thompson, chairman of the Norden society, Mayor Ori J. Sorenson and Rev. Knute Seehus of Decorah, Iowa, will deliver speeches in the afternoon. Refreshments and social diversions common to the people of Norway will be enjoyed.

Norwegian Song Books

Rev. Maglessen has ordered song books from Norway containing the Norwegian patriotic selections and has also procured a number of Norwegian flags, which will be used by the children of the Sunday schools in the parade from West avenue to Myrick park. The children will meet at 2 o'clock at the West avenue church, where the flags and song books will be distributed. The marching will start at 2:15.

At the morning services in the several churches, collections for the "Mindegave," a $100,000 fund which the Norwegians of America are raising to aid in the celebration in Norway, will be taken.

May 17 commemorates the separation of Norway from Denmark. On the 17th of May, 1814, Norway completed the drawing up of its constitution and formally declared itself an independent nation. Previous to the drawing up of this constitution Norway had for 400 years been the subject of Denmark. Denmark had ceded Norway to Sweden on the 4th of January, 1814. Norway did not agree to the proposition but crowned Crown Prince Kristian of Sweden, king of Norway. Shortly afterward Kristian abdicated. Norway then formed a confederation with Sweden which held until 1905, when Norway seceded and made Haakon VII king of Norway.

GIFFORDS OBSERVE SILVER WEDDING

Twenty-five years of married life without a word of disagreement is the record established by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Gifford, 1427 Avon street who are today celebrating their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

A co-incidence in connection with the wedding celebration is the settlement today of a damage suit brought against the Yeomen of America by Mr. and Mrs. Gifford to recover on an insurance policy held by their only child, Richard Gifford.

Richard Gifford was killed by falling through the trap door of fire station No. 4 in December, 1912.

The officers of the Yeomen of America refused to pay the policy, claiming it was not paid up at the time of the accident. Mr. and Mrs. Gifford then started suit for $1,000 and a few days ago the case was continued until the next term of court.

A settlement was today reached between the fraternal officers and Mr. and Mrs. Gifford through Attorneys F. H. Hartwell and A. C. Wolfe whereby they receive $400 for relinquishment of their claim.

ward's desire to assist young and struggling lawyers he never had to pay for it.

Judge E. C. Higbee closed the memorial by saying that he had associated with Col. Woodward a great deal, and heartily indorsed all that had been said of him. He ordered that the memorial presented by the Bar association be spread on the records of the court.

"One of the strongest points of Mr. Woodward as a lawyer was his wonderful influence on a jury. All jurors knew that he would not tell them anything that he did not believe to be true, and what he told them they believed without question as they would the presiding judge.

"One of the greatest regrets of his death is the loss of the unlimited knowledge he possessed.

"He was admired by all and I do not believe there is a man here today who could cause the deep regret felt at the death of Col. Woodward or cause such a demonstration as this of the realization of his loss."

Attorney R. S. Cowie of Whitehall told how he had gone to Mr. Woodward on several occasions looking for an opinion on some question of law, expecting to pay for it as any other client. He always got the opinion, but owing to Col. Wood-

OBSERVE BIRTH OF EPWORTH LEAGUE

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Epworth league of the Methodist Episcopal church will be given in the Methodist churches of the city tomorrow evening.

The league was established twenty-five years ago in Cleveland, Ohio, at a meeting of committees from five different young people's societies in the church, with the purpose of organizing one society.

5,000 Leagues

The Epworth league was formed, including all churches under the head of the Methodist Episcopal church. Today there are more than 5,000 leagues with a total membership of more than 3,000,000. La Crosse was one of the first to join the league, with a membership of 20, which has grown to more than 100. The congregation of the German Methodist church, of which the present pastor, Rev. J. H. Klaus was minister, was one of the first in La Crosse to join the league, a chapter being organized here shortly after the meeting in Cleveland.

Rev. J. A. Deikman, D. D., rector of the Dorcas institute of Cincinnati, will speak at the German Methodist church both morning and evening. His sermon in the morning will be in German. Monday evening he will speak to members of the Epworth league on "Victorious Living."

Sunday Night Services

The services Sunday evening at the First Methodist church will be given under the auspices of the Epworth league of that church. An interesting program including the history of the league and a discussion of its work will be given, besides the regular song service.

Sunday evening services at the West Avenue church will also be given under the auspices of the league. Rev. M. E. Fraser of the Caledonia Street church will address the league. Special music will be given.

Papers will be read at the evening services of the league at the Caledonia Street church, besides special music by the young people.

In citing some of the present faults in the administration of law, Chief Justice Winslow referred to instances in which cases had been thrown out of court on technicalities.

He said: "There are things in civil and criminal law that could be improved. There is also a chance for improvement in the system of courts. Simplification of proceeding in civil law practice is needed."

A Good Remedy.

There is a Baltimore divine who can administer a rebuke delicately, but, on occasion, he sees to it that the point is plain. Once a wealthy member of his congregation, who is very close to the minister, spoke of his intention to go abroad.

"I have never been on the ocean," said he to the clergyman, "and I would like to learn of something that will prevent me from becoming seasick."

"You might swallow a dime," said the divine. "You'll never give that up."

"William," she asked of a rosy faced lad, "can you tell me who George Washington was?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the quick reply. "He was an American gen'ral."

"Quite right," replied the teacher. "And can you tell us what George Washington was remarkable for?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the little boy. "He was remarkable because he was an American and told the truth."

THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER

The Reformed Church Makes Survey of Itself—Four Commissioners Examine Into the Denomination With a View to Greater Efficiency.

One more "first" thing in American church life is the survey of its own organization and activity, which has been made by the Reformed church in the United States and presented to the general synods now in session in Lancaster.

This very modern document is a fitting celebration of the golden jubilee of the Reformed church.

While, so far as I am aware, no other denomination has systematically made a comprehensive study of its own life and work, the plan is not wholly original, being borrowed from the World's Missionary Conference at Edinburgh in 1910.

Four commissions have been at work since last August seeking exact knowledge concerning the denomination and putting all of its affairs—general and particular—under review.

The result is a body of information that will result in more changes of method and more incidental reforms than could have been effected by years of oratory.

Digging Down to Bed-Rock.

The German Reformed church, as it is commonly called, is made up of the sort of hard-headed people to whom an investigation of facts would particularly appeal.

of the denomination with plans for financing the church's work.

Taking a Share of the World.
The scientific spirit in religious administration could scarcely go farther than this new plan, now quite generally adopted among the denominations, for which the denomination agrees to be responsible, providing all the agencies that may be necessary for its evangelization.

The first of these four commissions have the whole world under review and it passes on the judgment that the German Reformed church is responsible for ten million heathen. Their particular share are three and one-half million Japanese, three and one-half million Chinese and three million Mohammedans.

The church is already conducting extensive missions in Japan, spending fifty thousand dollars annually. Its Chinese work should be extended, the commission finds to an expenditure of three hundred thousand dollars annually.

To Stem Mohammedanism
No work is at present to be conducted in the Mohammedan world by this church and the experts recommend that it assume responsibility for a part of the Sudan in an effort to help stem the victorious progress of Islam southward in Africa.

At the present time the average of gifts for foreign missions in the denomination is thirty-three cents a year per member.

Within the field of home missions the commission accepts responsibility for a large number of German immigrants into the United States and Canada, for 125,000 Hungarians, for 125,000 Bohemians and for 15,000 Japanese on the Pacific coast.

It agrees to share with other denominations of the Presbyterian group, responsibility for 4,000,000 negroes. At present $200,000 a year are being spent for home missions, and an almost four-fold increase is desired.

RELEASE SNIPERS NOT MEXICANS

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Acting under instructions from President Wilson, Secretary Garrison yesterday afternoon ordered the release of the five alleged South American snipers held at Vera Cruz. This action followed a report from Admiral Badger stating that the nationality of the snipers was doubtful. Badger recommended their discharge in view of the fact that other Mexican snipers had been discharged previously.

Bible Selling

In Mexico
Mrs. F. S. Hamilton is in charge of the American Bible Society agency in Mexico, and she not only remained at her post but in spite of war increased Bible sales last year. She stayed in the City of Mexico until American marines landed at Vera Cruz, and with others she was forced to flee. Her correspondents, usually depended on to help sales, were scattered and discouraged, and only about twenty out of thirty faithful colporters were able to keep at work. Railroad transportation was interrupted and books could not be sent into many districts. Horses were stolen by bandits, and so there was little left but travel on foot.

Yet no fewer than 911 towns were visited, 23,369 volumes circulated—more Bibles, more testaments, more Scripture portions, increases all along. Most Mexicans of grade who buy Bibles not only live as they earn, but live before they earn, and often promise to pay on payday but debtors are often more hard up at payday than at other times. Yet out of the more than 23,000 volumes, only 3,850 were donated.

Reporting to the society for herself and her colporters, Mrs. Hamilton finds conditions in Mexico as a whole, worse than ever before. Armies, bandits, floods, persecution—these rarely scare away Bible colporters, nor did they in Mexico last year. Crossing a river in a dory, with a bag of Bibles and two companions, one of the latter deliberately upset the boat in order to distribute the colporter and prevent Bible distribution. The colporter was the only one of the three who could swim. He saved himself, and then generously saved the others. All that suffered were the Bibles from water. In one town in Lower California, where difficulties were exceptional, the extraordinary end came in shape of an invitation to speak in the Town Hall, and everybody came out to listen.

For some time Bible work in all northern Mexico has been interrupted altogether. Curiously, when Mexican soldiers buy Bibles at all they invest in largest numbers in the Book of Proverbs. Mrs. Hamilton has one blind colporter, a girl named Guadalupe Rosillo, who goes on her sightless journey into stores and streets, sometimes into tenements, selling last year no fewer than 511 Bibles and Testaments. There is in little known Yucatan, so the agents report, a colporter named Liborio Blanco who was formerly a railroad station agent, but who now teaches school, conducts church services although a layman, and further to help out expenses, keeps a shoe shop, not cobbling himself but hiring others to do so. This man has a big vision, a national and even world plan for Bible distribution.

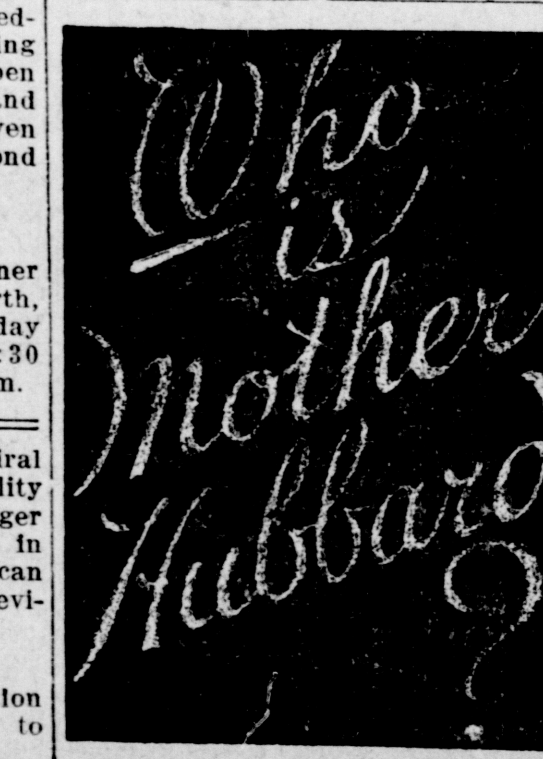

His brother Francisco, even more commanding in appearance, and speaking both Maya and Spanish, superintends a Sunday school in Campeche. Mrs. Hamilton is of the opinion that among the families in Yucatan, Campeche and Tabasco, better educated than in many other parts of Mexico, are to be found many Christian citizens upon whom Mexico can best rely when builders are needed for a new and stable republic.

Mayor Mitchell on the Chautauque Platform

Mayor Mitchell of New York will this summer join the ranks of the chautauque lecturers. In July he will speak at the original chautauque on the lake of that name in western New York. His topic is to be "The City and the State Constitution." It is understood he is there to outline some views concerning the new constitution which New York state is to frame, especially in its passage relating to the government of cities of the first class, and how to secure in office men of the right stamp to put legal provisions into effect. The date of his address is July 25, and nominations for delegates to the constitutional convention are to be made in August.

This same chautauque is this summer to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of its founding by the present Bishop Vincent. Features of the anniversary season are to be a Cost of Living Week, with economists to give data about prices; a musical week, with Victor Herbert and 500 voices; and an Expanding Church week, with Moderator Stone of the Presbyterian General Assembly as speaker. The chautauque monthly magazine, published for a short time recently as a weekly, is discontinued after this month, and the required readings of the Literary and Scientific Circle, formerly appearing in it, are thereafter to appear in the "Independent," as a department.

SUFFRAGETTE POINTERS

Colorado women stop coal field horrors. Army of one thousand women voters march to Denver capital in protest against slaughter and make Governor Ammons ask for federal intervention.

Nation roused by big demonstration. May second passes into history as epoch in suffrage movement—Cities or country stirred by impressive parades and mass meetings. United States senate committee votes almost unanimously for Shafroth measure. This amendment proposes that, upon petition of eight percent of the voters in any state, the question shall be put to popular vote, and if a majority of the votes cast on the subject are favorable, women suffrage in that state shall be established. It merely furnishes an easier way for women to get the ballot, in those states which now have constitutions unduly and sinfully hard to amend. It neither affirms or denies the right of congress to take federal action in regard to suffrage.

Many who object to the federal amendment as conflicting with their states rights principles will vote for the Shafroth measure which leaves the matter to the states themselves. Both amendments are being pushed and they in no way conflict—the Shafroth measure being intended to help the federal amendment, instead of hindering it. There is a good deal of misunderstanding in regard to these measures, but it is to be hoped that they will be speedily understood, and that there may be no clashing on the subject, which will surely be an injury to the whole cause.

Conservative old Boston, put 10,000 women in line May 2, the longest number in the country to parade, beating New York and Chicago.

Votes for women has received such a tremendous impetus from last Saturday's activities that the public has learned what a prod thing it is to be a suffragist, and thousands will be with us from this time forth and help make the work easier.

The movement for equal suffrage goes on apace, and he who doubts that it will ultimately prevail is but a poor student of the times.—Raleigh (N. C.) Observer.

The mayor of Minneapolis and many of the most prominent men of that city marched in its suffrage parade on May 2. One old gentleman, J. M. Bowler, wrote to the committee: "I have waited 76 years for this opportunity."

The Rose named chorus refers to the emblem of the anti-suffragists. Yankee Doodle up to date: Once on a time, dear sister Rose, Flew in a raging fury, And swore that none of her fair sex Should vote or serve on jury.

Yankee doodle, doodle do. Suffragists are dandy; Yankee doodle keep it up, For suffragists are sandy.

Rose went to England and declared The suffrage cause was dying, That in the states "sis moribund" La me! Now ain't that trying? A lively corps (e) is suffrage now, As it marches on to glory, In nineteen fifteen Sister Rose Will sing another story.

Describes Huge Market
Covering Twenty Acres
Where City's Food-

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.
April 16, 1914.

Sir, A. M. Brayton, Redactor Chefe da "DaCruz Tribuna," DaCruz, Estado de Wisconsin, Estados Unidos America Norte.

Prezado Amigo e Sr: (All of which is to say, My Dear Brayton:

In casting about for a subject that may interest the readers of the Tribune, it occurred to me that some information I procured at the request of a New York friend of Mr. Roy Peterson recently would probably fill the bill. A fitting topic for this information would be "The Stomach of Rio de Janeiro," for it has to do with the food supplies of this great metropolis.

Eat Much Meat.

In common with other Americans I had a vague idea before I came here that fruits and vegetables formed the bulk of food consumed by the people in this and other tropical countries. Judge of my surprise then when I found that meats and fish are consumed in much larger proportion than in the cooler countries. In fact so great is the consumption of meat that it required more than 200,000 cattle alone to feed this city last year. The total amount of meat sold in Rio de Janeiro in 1913 was 113,000,960 pounds or an average of 9,423,500 pounds a month. This doesn't sound as if the "peanut butter propagandists" had made much headway under the Southern Cross, does it?

Statistics are always dry reading but in order to get to the heart of this story I will burden you with a few furnished by the last annual statement of the Board of Health, which fiscalizes the killing and sale of all meat here. According to this statement there were killed and sold in 1913, 209,813 cattle, 34,274 hogs, 13,228 sheep, and 11,263 calves; or an average per day of about 500 cattle, 100 hogs, and fifty each of sheep and calves.

Meat is considerably cheaper here than in the states as the following "high and low" price table will show: beef 17 to 26 cents a kilo; pork 20 to 53 cents a kilo; mutton 40 to 60 cents a kilo; and veal 20 to 40 cents a kilo. A kilo is two and one-fifth pounds. This table shows the range of the market in 1913 and I may add in passing that the lower figures were much in predominance.

$75,000 Pounds of Fish.

Besides this there is an average of about 75,000 pounds of fresh fish sold on the market every day and an unknown quantity of prepared meats such as ham and bacon, and canned fancy meats and fish foods.

All animals killed for food in Brazil are slaughtered in government slaughter houses and under government inspection. The place where all the meat is prepared for Rio de Janeiro is Santa Cruz, a station about thirty miles from the city.
The killing is done early in the morning and the fresh meat is brought to the city that same morning in special trains and unloaded into government automobiles at a special depot. These autos distribute the meat to the 2,000 or more meat markets of the city in time for the day's trade. According to the law here meat must be sold within twenty-four hours after it is killed. It is all marked with the government stamp and should any of it remain on the retailer's block after the twenty-four hours are up, it must be destroyed, under heavy penalty.

They have no refrigeration in Rio de Janeiro, the manufacture of ice growing to large proportions only within the last few years. For this reason the meat cannot be kept any great length of time and was no doubt the reason the twenty-four hour law was enacted.

A charge to the merchants bringing the animals to the slaughterhouse is made for butchering as follows: cattle, two dollars a head; calves, one dollar and a half a head; sheep, hogs and "tender meats," one dollar a head. When this impost is paid no other charge is made for the distribution of the meat to the retailers. All meat for consumption in the city must be killed at the federal slaughter house except poultry and small animals, such as goats and kids.

Veterinarians and experts employed by the health department carefully examine all meat before it is killed and the fact that they condemn nearly two percent of the cattle alone shows that do not permit the public health to be endangered by diseased meat. Most of the cattle condemned are tubercular and are killed and destroyed. These experts do their work at the slaughter houses.

It is a very interesting sight to see the meat train come into the city and unload. A long line of huge covered automobiles back up to the platform and white robed carriers, transfer staggering loads from the hooks in the cars to the autos. They balance the halves and quarters of beef and pork on their heads and trots along the platform as if their weight was but a few pounds instead of a few hundred. By the time they have finished distributing to the retailers throughout the city, these white-robed carriers have become the color of the meat, their burden.
There must be more than a hundred of these distributing autos.

Not Skillful.

It seems to me that the retail meat merchants here are not very skillful in carving the meat for their customers. They do not cut it up into the various steaks and roasts and other portions with which I am familiar back home. If a customer desires a steak, the dealer will cut a strip off from where the last piece came off and will keep cutting from this one place until it is all gone. All parts cost the same, and the retailer sees to it that there is no waste. Perhaps this accounts for the low price of meat, because there are no choice portions and no left overs.

There is in the course of building a big steel structure near the harbor, the property of Swift and Armour Co., which will be Brazil's first packing plant. It will be completed and ready for business this year and according to men familiar with the situation here, this packing plant will be a veritable mint, because the Brazilian is very fond of refrigerated and prepared meats and willing to pay fancy prices to indulge this taste.
All the cattle that go to furnish meat for Rio de Janeiro and all Brazil for that matter, are native stock, raised for the most part in the state of Minas Geraes. There is a heavy duty on imported meats and for that reason ham and bacon and other such luxuries are sold at almost prohibi-tively prices. It is rumored that the Swift & Armour packing plant project includes a vast cattle country development plan, aiming to make the wild lands of Brazil the meat producing center of the world. It is even said that the "meat trust" of the states is attempting to buy the railroads of Brazil in the furtherance of this project and that they already have control of nearly a majority of the railroad stock of the country except the government-owned roads. It is argued that if these interests can gain control of the railroads here they will devote millions to the settlement of the unoccupied lands and that the raising of cattle will be developed to a hitherto unknown extent. How much of this is truth and how much is gossip I am unable to learn, but I know that the proposed packing plant is building apace and when it is finished it will be one of the largest in the world. They surely must expect to get their cattle from Brazil because of the heavy duty on imported cattle.

A retail meat market here is much different in appearance to those at home, first because the store building itself is arranged differently and second because the meat is displayed for sale in their own way. The store is built so that the entire front is open to the street, there being no windows or doors of glass. It is just like a big hole in the wall. The meat is hung around on hooks in long strips and chunks.
Each piece is marked in blue ink with the government stamp showing the hour it was killed. In the center of the shop is the cutting block, but the dealer seldom takes a chunk down to carve it for the customer—he just slices off the amount required from the piece on the hook.
One would naturally think that flies and vermin would be attracted by the meat exposed this way but for some reason this is not true. A meat market is singularly free from flies and other dirt. In fact, there seem to be but few flies in the city, although goodness knows there are enough other "bichus" or bugs to make up for their absence. The meat markets sell nothing but pork, beef, mutton and veal. Poultry, eggs, fish and other foods of this nature are sold in the grocery stores and on the municipal markets.

A trip to the municipal market of Rio de Janeiro is one of the most interesting expeditions possible in this city of interesting sights. I went there one morning early when the buying activity was at its height and I shall never forget the sights I saw there.

20-Acre Market.

The municipal market is a huge building divided into sections like a wheel in which streets about two blocks long are the spokes. I should judge that the market building covers an area of about fifteen or twenty acres and it is a regular beehive for activity. Along each of the streets which divide it into sections are stalls and small shops from which the various products of the country are sold. The vegetable stalls occupy four or five blocks, fruit stalls take almost a like space, meat markets, fish markets, animal shops and other food stuffs and goods stores occupy the rest.

About midnight the wagons from the country begin to arrive with the more perishable vegetables and fruits and at five o'clock in the morning the market is thrown open to the buyers. The housewives of the city flock there at the break of day to do their day's marketing and from their stall until noon it is one confused squabble and commotion, argument over prices, hawking of wares, auctioning of fish, crying of porters and general clatter. At four o'clock in the afternoon the market is closed and is thoroughly cleaned under the inspection of the health department and the stalls again begin to replenish their stocks of goods. The market is built close to the caes on the water front so that the little coaster sail boats anchor at its very doors to unload stuff from up or down the coast. One glimpse at this big market building before the buying begins will show better the amount it requires to feed a city of a million people than all anyone can write about it. The great building is literally stuffed full and the variety of things seems to be endless.

Many Kinds of Fish.

Perhaps the most interesting section of the market is the fish market.
Before dawn the fisherman's catamarans and canoes and boats pull up to the caes and unload their cargoes of living fish onto the stone and tile floors of the market. I never saw such a variety of fish in my life and I never knew that there was so many kinds of sea food. These are a few that I remember: oysters, lobsters, shrimps, pollups, octopuses, crabs, clams, sharks and regular fish.
Fish as round as a ball, fish shaped like a toothpick, fish flat and thin as paper and fish whose gaping head alone weighs a ton or more, pink fish, green fish, white fish, black fish and fish of all colors, beautiful fish and ugly fish, turtles big enough to haul a Mississippi river steam boat, sword fish and hammer headed sharks. They say the fin of a shark is delicious food. Octupus with clutching tentacles, crabs with claws big enough to circle a man's leg, shrimps piled on the floor, a ton in a heap. Sardines by the boat load, oysters in huge baskets and the others sorted and separated according to their kind and condition. Here is a list of native names of fish commonly found on the market: Garopas, badejos, Meros, chernos, pescadas e pescadinhas, sorrocas, char-cus, cheleteiros, cornovas, tainhas, paraty, oshos de cao, oshetes, enxovas, paragos, robalos, linguados, sardinhas, carcoses, arraias, ostras, polvos, lagostas, camaroes, sirys, caranguejos, and nanorados.

These are all salt water fish and caught within a few miles of Rio de Janeiro. Whatever fresh water fish are sold here are imported from Portugal and France but the quantity is not large in comparison with the sea fish and is only imported on fete days.

All these fish are auctioned to men who peddle them about the city in small lots, except those purchased by the housewives early in the morning, and it is great to watch these men bidding for their fish. They wangle with the seller over the condition of the fish, claiming that they are not fresh even when the fish are scarcely dead, crying that they are being defrauded by weight, and that the price is being run up on them by professional bidders and quarreling with each other until the babbie becomes so loud that the police come to straighten out their tangles. Then they begin all over again. But somehow they manage to dispose of twenty or thirty tons of fish, cleaned and cut into steaks and sizes suitable for cooking, in two or three hours.

Odd Peddler System.

There is one institution in Rio de Janeiro, that grew out of its market system, that I believe is unique. That is the carrier or hawk system. Hundreds and hundreds of men make an honest (?) living carrying market products to the different parts of the city, running for many miles with two baskets hung from a limber pole balanced on their necks. These baskets are loaded with vegetables, with fruits, with fish, and with the other odds and ends of the market.
A man often carries a load of from two to three hundred pounds in this way for five miles before he reaches his particular territory. The carriers are all licensed and pay regular tax to the government. They prefer to carry their stuff in baskets slung from a pole because the tax on a push cart or wagon is so much greater that they can't afford it.

Each hawkster announced his coming with a peculiar cry or peculiar musical note on some instrument or other. I have not yet learned to distinguish the one from the other, but one has a triangle which he plays in a set tune, one a horn, he blows in just one way, one a whistle, one two heavy sticks he beats together in a peculiar tune, one a bell, one claps his hands and others sing out their wares so that they can be heard for blocks. It is a very odd sight to see them toll up the street I live on for instance. The street winds back and forth up the side of a mountain and is almost as steep as the path up to the stone quarry on "Granddad Bluff" in La Crosse.
The street is as rough as the "rocky road to Dublin," being paved with boulders and shapeless paving stones. On each side is a smooth wall with the houses perched on top, one above the other. From my window I can look clear down to the foot of the street and it is an ever endless amusement for me to watch the hawksters coming up, with a great load balanced on head or hung from pole on shoulders, singing a song of goods for sale, or marching to the notes of a horn he plays in a never varying tune. They stop in front of each door and give an extra flourish and if the kitchen happens to need his particular kind of wares the servant comes out to haggle with him. These short stops are the only rests he gets and his day's work is not done until night when there are none awake to buy.

Many of the housewives take a servant with them to carry home their purchases, or if not there are thousands of carriers at the market anxious to earn a little money by carrying the burden for her.

It is undoubtedly one of the privileges of the housewife to complain about the scarcity of good things on the market, but it seems to me that there is less chance for this complaint in Rio de Janeiro than any place I have ever been. Nearly every kind of vegetable that is found on the market at home any time of the year is here the year around with many native kinds besides. Potatoes are imported from France because the native variety are not considered as good as the French grown.
Squashes, carrots, onions, cabbages, cauliflower, parsnips, rutabagas, radishes, yams, egg-plant, vegetable oysters, kohlrabi, and watercress, lettuce and other greens for salads are common to the United States and Brazil. Here besides they have chu-chu, a kind of squash or melon, many different kinds of melons and fruits that resemble melons, heart of palm fronds, artichokes, very cheap and good, maceta, a purple vegetable something like a pepper which is served stuffed with rice and meats, and very many kinds that I have not yet had time to learn the names of.

I get some kind of vegetable to eat nearly every day that I never tasted before and that I do not know the name of. Of course the native name would not be very enlightening as you noticed in the names of the fish.

Many Odd Fruits.

The fruits here are in great variety and very good. The Bahia orange, which is as green as grass when it is ripe, is the best flavored orange I ever tasted and I do not understand why it is not imported in the United States. There is a banana here they call the "fingerling" that I never saw at home. It is small and brown and delicious. It seems to me that this could also be imported at home. There grow in the garden where I live, peaches, bananas, mangoes, oranges, limes and grapes and also some pomegranates and there are as many kinds of fruit here as vegetables that I don't know the names of. Perhaps when Teddy Roosevelt completes his collection of the flora and fauna of this country he may give you reliable information on these things.

Besides all these native fruits they import apples, pears, grapes and peaches from California and from Argentina. Imported fruits are very expensive however. There is only one kind of native fruit I have been disappointed in so far and that is the fig. It tastes like eating foam with seeds in it.

But thank goodness, I have managed to get away from one thing that I could not escape at home and that is "breakfast food." I haven't had a taste of prepared excelsior since I came to Brazil and they don't know what it is here. In the first place they do not eat breakfast until noon and then they require a three or four course meal with real solids in it. They eat only two meals a day, breakfast and dinner, contenting themselves with a cup of coffee in the morning.

Coffee National Drink.

I suppose this story would be incomplete unless I told you about what they drink here. Coffee is of course the national drink and they drink coffee all the time. The first drink of coffee is taken in bed in the morning, the second at nine or ten, next at noon, then in the middle of the afternoon, after work and at dinner time, and then a night cap before going to bed. Coffee shops are more numerous here in proportion than saloons in La Crosse. Two or three to every block in the city.
The people sit out on the sidewalks drinking little cups of coffee and the pleasant odor of roasting coffee is in the air all the time. I never knew what real coffee tasted like until I came here and it is as cheap as water, two or three cents a cup.

The Brazilian is not a drunkard and he drinks little alcohol except in light wines with his meals. There is a drink called chassiss or paraty distilled from sugar cane juice and it is something like "Norwegians" "Akvavit," with a "kick like a mule."
The negroes are very fond of it and as it is very cheap they indulge in it to quite an extent.

They make considerable wine here but the greater part consumed is imported from Portugal and France.
There are five or six large breweries in this city but beer cannot be called as popular a beverage as in the states. There is little or no beer imported.

Although all the necessities of life are fairly cheap here, it is remarkable how much it costs to live, the prices charged in restaurants and cafes going beyond anything within my experience at home. Why this is so I am unable to state, because labor is not expensive nor is transpor-

Still Martial Law.

The martial law I wrote you about in my last letter has been extended another month and will undoubtedly be extended until the end of the present administration as it seems the only way possible to keep peace.
All is quiet and life has resumed its natural course. We hear no more talk of revolution and that may mean that it will be sprung on us as a surprise next time. There has been a new issue of money, all silver and nickle, so that the army still draws its pay and while this lasts peace will remain in our midst.

P. S. I notice by The Tribune that friends of Dr. Ralph Allen are trying to get a pardon for him, claiming that he was "railroaded" through a "woman's jealousy." In view of the fact that he had three wives in as to which particular "woman" they refer.

PREFERS WAR TO WIFE

A new and interesting angle has been given to the Mexican situation on the Pacific coast. Sooo Too Sing appeared before Superior Judge Mo-gan in San Francisco to ask a divorce from Hoo She. He said he wanted his divorce right away.

"What is your hurry?" asked the court.

"Me cookee cluissah California," explained the plaintiff. "Me got no flont. Me no cookee, boys no fight velly good."

Sooo Too Sing said after he returned from a cruise he found a note from his wife saying she had left because she preferred a man who lived on land.

Judge Morgan promised to take the international phase of the situation under consideration.

California's Livestock Industry.

The growth of the livestock industry in California between the years 1910 and 1913 shows greater increase than in any other of the 17 states west of the Missouri. According to statistics, the investigation showed an actual increase for the three-year period of 392,000 cattle, 83,000 horses, and 231,000 sheep.

Nature Never Intended Woman to be Sickly

As a matter of fact it is her right and her duty to enjoy perfect health and strength—to be just as strong and healthy as man, perhaps more so—in view of the fact that it is she who brings into the world the offspring.
Every woman can be strong and healthy. Don't resign yourself to a delicate life.

If you suffer from headaches, backaches, nervousness, low spirits, lack of ambition, or have lost all hope of being well again—it's more than an even chance that you will speedily regain your health if you will try

GUNBOATS AT PUERTO

WASHINGTON, May 16. — The Mexican federal gunboats Zaragosa and Bravo and tug Vera Cruz, which engaged in the Tampico fighting, have arrived at Puerto Mexico, according to navy department dispatches today.

The consul at Tampico wired that the constitutionalist General Gouzales had given assurances that every consideration will be shown Americans and other foreigners. The city is calm.

Consul Bonney of San Luis Potosi aboard the Moro Castle enroute to Galveston, notified the department that no Americans had been killed in his consulate district up to the time he left.

Great Invention.

Mr. Edison, who recently tried to take a holiday from work, and is said to have become ill through boredom, is apt to be rather crusty with visitors to his workrooms when they ask too many questions. One day a rather talkative journalist pointed at a model.
"What's that?" he asked. Mr.
Edison, who was getting very weary of the man's endless questions, replied blandly: "That, my dear sir, is a cradle that rocks by sound. You put the baby in and the louder it howls the faster the cradle rocks!"

All Roads are Level Roads to the Indian Motorcycle

"Rushing" a hill is an unknown experience to the Indian rider. "A twist of the wrist" silently gives the command to the motor for more power. And the power is there. It responds instantly. The rider feels that peculiar "bite"—a thrilling, assuring sensation of the answering motor!—and then the speed deftly picks up—picks up—picks up—without a moment's hesitation. The steepest grade offers no trouble to the Indian-mounted man.

Rough roads, too, mean nothing to the Indian tourist. With his machine fitted with footboards and that incomparable, inimitable comfort feature, the Cradle Spring

Frame, shocks and springs are dispensed. Indian riding is smooth riding whatever the condition of the highway.

With stupendous power—with perfected comfort devices—all roads are level roads to the Indian

NEW YORK, May 16.—The Tigers took their fourth straight game from the Yankees yesterday afternoon incidentally handing Ray Caldwell his first defeat this season, 4 to 2. Both Dauess and Caldwell pitched in fine form, each allowing only six hits, but the Detroit twirler had slightly better support, errors behind Caldwell accounting for at least one run. Umpire Chills' decisions throughout the game were far from satisfactory to the crowd and a police escort was necessary to protect him from the angry body of fans who gathered at the exits after the game. BOSTON, May 16.—The Browns gave the Red Sox a 9 to 3 beating yesterday to wind up the series, pounding Biedent to all parts of the field. Walker put the ball over the left field fence in the first inning, the first time it has been done in years. Joe Wood pitched the ninth inning and the crowd gave him a tremendous ovation as he walked to the box for the first time this season. Wellman had the Red Sox scattered at all times, allowing two runs in the ninth after the game was cinched. Score:

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The Senators took the final game of the series from the White Sox yesterday 6 to 2. Cicotte received poor support and four Washington runs were made with only two hits. Wolfgang relieved him in the third with one run in and none out and retired the side without further scoring. Rabe held them down the rest of the way. Gandil's batting was the only feature of a poor exhibition of baseball. Score:

WATCHING THE SCOREBOARD

BY HAL SHERIDAN

The Pirates' place of pre-eminence in the National league is getting just a wee bit wobbly under the Giants' attack.

With Mathewson on the mound, McGraw's men mauled the Marauders 5 to 3, the second successive setback for the Pirates in their first series with New York.

The Giants won by bunching ten hits off McQuillan in five frames.

The Tigers made a clean sweep of their series with the Yanks, winning yesterday, 4 to 2 and handing Caldwell his first 1914 defeat.

Burns, first sacker, who biffed a home run and Ty Cobb, who made two doubles, drew a walk and pilfered a base, led the American leaders attack.

The Terrapins, Federal pace setters, defeated the Hoofeds 2 to 1. Runt Walsh broke up the pitchers' duel between George Suggs and Cy Falkenberg in the eighth by swatting a home run.

The Cubs had a great field day at Chicago, chasing the thirteen drives of the determined Dodgers, who landed on Lavender, Zabel and Humphries for a 12 to 4 count.

Claude Hendrix's deliveries dazzled the Buffalo Federals to dizziness, and only three of them saw first, two on singles. Hendrix started the Chifeds clouting with a homer in the third, and six of nine additional hits resulted in runs.

The St. Louis Browns pounded Biedent's delivery for eleven hits in eight innings, winning over the Boston Braves, 9 to 3.

With Yingling pitching, the Cincinnati Reds outplayed the Boston Red Sox at every stage and took the third straight victory, 4 to 2.

Bunched hitting overcame their own pitchers' wildness and the tip-tops took another step toward the second berth occupied by the St. Louis Browns.

The numerous pitchers allowed 16 walks in all.

Cicotte was the victim of the Senators yesterday. The White Sox were given a 6 to 3 dose.

KERNAN AND TRACY PLAY GREAT GAME

Two Old La Crosse Players on Infield Picked as Best in the Wisconsin-Illinois League

V. F. Barnett, scribing on the Madison State Journal, picks the Oshkosh infield as the best in the Wisconsin-Illinois league. Incidentally half of the infield in question formerly belonged to La Crosse.

Joe Kernan is holding down the second station and Tracy, former first baseman here, is playing the initial sack for the Oshkosh team. Barnett's comment follows:

"Speaking of $100,000 infields, what's the matter with the defense Joe Killian has built up in Oshkosh? Tracey on first is the best man in that position in the league. He is a swell fielder and a dangerous hitter. He cuts off more hits in a year than any other first sacker in the league, or at least he has in the past. Joe Kernan on second is good enough to be given the "up and down" every fall by a major league club, which is something for a player in this league. Murphy on third proved his worth last year. Little as he is he hit the ball hard and timely and played a marvelous fielding game. Kavanaugh on short should be the real sensation of the league. Joe Tinker had him playing the shortstop for the Chicago Cubs for a time this year and pronounced him one of the best youngsters he had ever seen. He was sold to Oshkosh a week ago. Doesn't this infield look like a winner over any combination in the league?"

Tracey played here about six years ago and was sold to St. Paul. He jumped to the outlaw coast league, however, instead of reporting to St. Paul, and two years later was reinstated and sold to Oshkosh by John Elliott, at that time president of the La Crosse baseball club.

Three years ago Kernan went up to the majors but after a short try-out was dropped and finally landed with Oshkosh.

HIGH TEAM FACING GOPHER CHAMPIONS

The high school baseball team is playing the Lanesboro high team this afternoon. The management of the local team considers this game the hardest La Crosse will have to play. Last Saturday Lanesboro defeated Preston by a score of 9 to 2. Last year Lanesboro held the championship of southern Minnesota. The coaches declare that if this game is won by the local team they will be able to defeat Winona high next Saturday. The high team also expects to wipe out the defeat they received at the hands of the Normalites in their next game which will take place in two weeks.

WELL-FEDS NAME GIVEN TO FEDERALISTS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 16.—Fans today took kindly to the suggestion of Well-Feds for the sobriquet of the Federal league as a whole. A local sporting editor figured that for an organization promoted by one restaurant owner, one former oyster wagon driver, one baker, and two brewers, such a name would not be far amiss.

Tracey played here about six years ago and was sold to St. Paul. He jumped to the outlaw coast league, however, instead of reporting to St. Paul, and two years later was reinstated and sold to Oshkosh by John Elliott, at that time president of the La Crosse baseball club.

Three years ago Kernan went up to the majors but after a short try-out was dropped and finally landed with Oshkosh.

ZYBSZKO WINNER WITHOUT SHOES

MINNEAPOLIS, May 16.—Stanislaus Zybszko again demonstrated that he is a better wrestler than Henry Ordeman, the former American champion—if he works with his bare feet. After Ordeman obtained a fall with the toe hold in 23 minutes last night before an enthusiastic crowd of his countrymen, Zybszko angrily tore off his shoes and threw them over the crowd.

The Pole then won the match, his first fall in 14 minutes with a head scissors and crotch hold and the second in thirty-three minutes with a crotch and half Nelson. Zybszko forfeited $500.

DENVER, May 16.—To plead with President Wilson to use his personal influence to secure a settlement of the Colorado coal strike and to describe to him at first hand the horror of the battle of Ludlow, Mrs. Pearl Jolly, leader of the women at Ludlow; Mrs. Mary Petruce, whose three children were burned to death, and Pedro Valdez, who lost his brother, wife and six children in the fire, are enroute to Washington today. The delegation will reach Washington probably Monday.

CLOTHIERS SIGN FOUR MORE MEN

Krause and Falk Have Not Jumped to the Athletics; Clothing Company Plays Sparta Sunday

At the club meeting of the La Crosse Clothing company baseball team held last evening, Roy Falk and Wm. Krause, veterans of the team for many years past, and who were claimed by the Athletics for the coming season, were signed up by the club management. Falk and Krause will play outfield positions during the coming season, while A. Meinert, a former outfielder, will assume the position at third base, which he is at present holding down in fine shape for the high school team.

Weeks and Becker, also of the local high school club, were signed up last night, making the club complete for the season. The management now claims as strong a team as any semi-professional club could wish for. Following is the permanent lineup for the season as it will be presented against Sparta at Sparta tomorrow afternoon. Sparta has never been able to score upon the Clothiers during the last three years:

Satek or Weeks, catcher; Copsey or Weigel, pitcher; Wuest, 1b; Horn, ss; Solie, 2b; A. Meinert, 3b; Falk, lf; Beranek, cf; Krause, rf; Becker, pitcher and outfielder; O. Meinert, utility.

"JACKPOT GOLF" IS NEWEST GAME

CHICAGO, May 16.—"Jackpot golf" is the very newest. It was discovered on the Jackson park links by the Woodlawn police and six university of Chicago students today are hoping their fines won't exceed that last remittance from home. To play the game, you find a secluded hole and drop a dime (or a dollar) apiece in the cup. Then you take turns putting and the winner takes the pot. There is a law against gambling in public places and the police have decided "jackpot golf" comes under this head.

Heck—look, your wife always get the last word? Peck—Not always. She talks with other women.

SPOTLIGHTS

OBRECHT STOCK COMPANY
"The New School Teacher" was the offering of the Obrecht Stock company last night at the La Crosse theater. The play was cleverly presented by a well balanced cast, every member displaying ability. Special mention must be made of Miss Sarah Obrecht, who impersonated the character of Bossy Jones. This clever little lady, scarcely out of her teens, has a bright future, and her ability last night was a scall example of her cleverness. All in all the company is a remarkable one. Every member is an artist in her or his line. The ladies' orchestra renders very pleasing music at 8:15 and a funny vaudeville skit between acts is very clever and humorous.

Starting Sunday matinee the popular company will present "Dolores," a late drama in four acts, with Mr. Van Murrel in the cast.

AFTER LEVINSKY

INDIANAPOLIS, May 16.—"I'm going to knock him out if I can, in one round or ten rounds," said Jack Dillon today, speaking of Battling Levinsky, who will fight Dillon here May 29, before the Speedway crowd. "He had the excuse of high altitude in Butte, but he cannot have that here," Dillon will weigh 165 and Levinsky, 170.

ENGLISH PONIES COMING

LONDON, May 16.—The steamship Minneapolis, with the thirty-six ponies to be used by the British polo players in the international cup matches at Meadowbrook, sailed for America today. Twenty-five grooms will care for the ponies during the trip. The mounts will be exercised daily on the main deck.

CLASS TO MAKE CITIZENS

Citizens ready-made, prepared for scrutiny and approval of Uncle Sam, will be turned out by a department of the Superior public schools to be started on Monday. Classes will be conducted regularly three times each week up to the time of citizenship examinations in circuit court by Special United States Examiner R. K. Doe. It is expected eighty of the applicants for final citizenship papers will enter the class. Principal J. G. King of the night school will be in charge.

Two swelled heads are worst than none.

Be sure to get real Resinol

If you want to get rid of eczema, pimples, or other distressing skin eruptions, you will accept no "substitute" for Resinol. Preparations similar in name or appearance are not "just the same as Resinol." Although a few unscrupulous dealers may offer them as or for Resinol, they are often crudely made, of little healing power, and some may even be dangerous to use. Buy in the original blue package.

LEE "FATHER OF SHOW BUSINESS"

Nat Goodwin and De Wolfe Hopper are about tied for the matrimony record of the American stage, but "Jimmy" Lee and Eddie Foy have undisputed joint title to the open championship for family men in the show business. Both have seven children actively with them in their shows.

"Jimmy" Lee, as his company affectionately dubs him, is the big concussion in the Lee musical stock company at the Majestic. With few exceptions, the Lee company is made up of descendants and relatives of a manager.

The Lee family and its assistants will present a new musical comedy "In Mexico," with new stage settings and new costumes—also new musical and chorus numbers—beginning tomorrow at the matinee.

CUBAN NEGROES MAY REBEL

In Havana persistent rumors are current that negroes are preparing for a new rising in several provinces. Many believe that the movement is connected with the trial of former Governor Asbert on the charge of killing General Armando Riva, chief of the national police, in which a verdict has not been given.

The secretary of the interior declares the rumors are groundless, but that the government is prepared to meet any emergency.

MINERS TO GO BACK

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 16.—Every man in the Kanawha, Coal River, Paint Creek and Cabin Creek coal fields was working today or preparing for work Monday, as a result of the vote of the several local unions to resume operations pending negotiations for a new wage contract.

KONEY GETS THREE HITS OFF "BIG SIX"

Eddie Konetchy, the La Crosse boy, is evidently regaining his batting eye. Yesterday he landed on "Big Six" Mathewson for a two bagger and two singles and scored one of the runs. Koney was the only Pirate who was able to get to the big fellow for more than one hit. The Giants made it two straight from Pittsburgh.

MANY WATCH REGATTA.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—The parkway banks along the Schuylkill were black with humanity early this afternoon as throngs assembled to watch the annual American regatta. A beautiful day and the expectation of some spirited brushes brought out one of the largest crowds which has ever witnessed the classic event. The feature of the program will be the eight oared shell race with Harvard, Yale, the Middies, Syracuse and the Union Boat club of Boston, as contestants.

Even a few blasts on Henry Lane Wilson's bugle horn would not save Huerta now.

FINE ANNA LOWRY FOR BAD LANGUAGE

Lecturer Found Guilty of Using Obscene Words in Speech to Women at Winona

TAXED $35 WITH JAIL ALTERNATIVE

Says She Will Appeal Decision; Court Room Is Crowded and Many Are Unable to Get In

Despite her claim that she had not used the words mentioned in the complaint made against her, Miss Anna Lowry, anti-Catholic lecturer, was found guilty of the use of obscene language in a lecture room at Winona March 15, and sentenced to pay a fine of $35 and costs, with the alternative of ten days in jail, by Judge S. H. Somsen in the municipal court at Winona this morning. Miss Lowry's counsel gave notice of appeal, and sentence was suspended for ten days. About a dozen witnesses testified. All of them were women. Practically all of them agreed that the language ascribed to Miss Lowry in the complaint sworn to by Miss Mary O'Brien, a school teacher, had been used. The defense witnesses agreed with the witnesses for the prosecution upon this point.

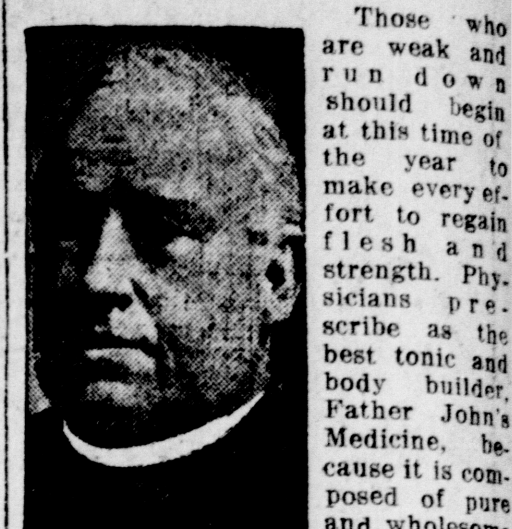

Miss Lowry took the stand in defense, asserting that she had not used the language alleged by the complaint. An attempt to prove that the words were from the writings of a Catholic author of the middle ages was ruled out by the judge upon objection of the prosecution.

Miss Lowry declared that the meeting, which was for women only, was attended by no girls under fourteen years old, but this was stricken out as being irrelevant.

The court room, which has room for about 75 persons, was jammed, and a crowd blocked the entrance from the doors clear into the streets. More than 200 persons were on the outside, attempting to fight their way into the court room.

Friends and followers of Miss Lowry are greatly incensed over what they regard as persecution of the lecturer.

Bill to Ascertain the Tribal Rights of Wisconsin Redskins Broadened in the Upper House

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Much more liberal treatment of Wisconsin Indians was given on Friday by the senate than was accorded them by the house in passing the Indian appropriation bill. The senate Indian affairs committee bill reported a bill containing new provisions for the completion of the roll of the unallotted members of the LaPointe or Rebov band of Chippewas, with provision for selling the timber, cutting lumber, etc., and turning into available money much of the property which has made the Indians land poor.

Sweeping Probe Ordered

The bill also orders a complete investigation of the condition of the alleged destitute St. Croix Chippewas Indians in Polk, Burnett, Washburn and Douglas counties. The Indian office is directed to determine whether their tribal rights are, whether they have been deprived of any heretofore, and authorizes full reparation for any injustices done these Indians. The bill increases the Hayward Indian school appropriation from $40,670, as the house provided, to $42,670, and adds a $15,000 employees' building at Tomah.

Konop Returns Home

Representative Konop and his family left Washington on Friday. Mr. Konop expects to spend ten days or two weeks in his district. He is the third member of the delegation to leave the city within the last few days. Representatives Lenroot and Nelson being the other two.
